BANDIT TAKEN AFTER PISTOL FIGHT IN STORE

Terrance Burke, Out of State Prison Less Than a Week, Pleads Guilty to Friday Night Stickup Job; Captured By Wounded Drug Clerk.

Elven White, 25, a drug clerk, was in St. Elizabeth's hospital recovering from a bullet wound, and Terrance Burke, 22, was facing ten years imprisonment in the state penitentiary Saturday, as the aftermath of an attempted holdup and a gun battle between the two men at Skinner's drug store, 741 South Eleventh, at midnight Friday.

White took advantage of a moment when the hold-up man's back was turned to procure a small-calibre revolver Returning to the front of the store, he ordered the bandit to hold up his hands

Instead, the armed stick-up pulled the trigger of his 45 caliber revolver. The piece failed to fire. He pulled the trigger again, and a shot entered White's arm near the shoulder White fired

Show Case Barricades.

A pistol battle ensued, with each of the men barricaded behind show cases They were facing each other on opposite sides of the store Both of them fired until their pistols were emptied

When the hold-up man attempted escape through the front door, White grappled with him. Two other customers in the store, aided detaining the armed man until police arrived.

At St. Elizabeth's hospital Saturday, Drs Becker and Lewis operated upon White to remove the bullet, which had lodged near the shoulder blade. The operation was successful, but there is still a slight danger of infection or other complication However, Dr. Lewis stated Saturday noon that White is in no immediate danger, and that he probably will recover.

The hold-up man, Terrance Burke, pleaded guilty before District Judge Shepherd Saturday to a charge of felonious assault and robbery by violence. He was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary

"I am guilty and I deserve anything you give me," Burke had told the judge a few minutes before.

Out of Pen Five Days.

But five days freedom from the institution to which he must now return preceded Burke's escapade, he said. He had been sentenced in Grand Island to eighteen months for burglary and two years for breaking jail at Grand Island while he was awaiting removal to the penitentiary. He was received May 25, 1924, and discharged February 14 of this year after serving both sentences.

"This matter of young men going into stores and holding men up on the streets seems to be getting comparatively common," observed Judge Shepherd after he had Burke's story and County Attorney Towle's statement. "This is essentially a very great crime against law and order and must be dealt with rigorously.

"It is fortunate for you that you are still alive and it is still more fortunate that this other young man, the drug clerk is alive

"Taking into account your attitude here and your plea of guilty, I will not give you the maximum of 15 years imprisonment."

As Judge Shepherd pronounced the words "Ten years," Burke sat down and yawned.

In telling his story to the court, he said his home is in Chicago, where he finished high school and went one year to preparatory school. His first adventure into the west was when he was still in his 'teens

Flood Still Is Menacing West Coast

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Flood waters from the upper drainage of the Colorado, Gila and Big Williams rivers still menaced farm and ranch lands today in Imperial valley. All available men and teams were at work constructing additional levees to protect existing bulwarks from a threatened overflow.

The danger was believed temporarily averted when a diversion dam across Colorado river below Rockwood gate was dynamited to give the waters, reported flowing 55,000 second feet at the heading, clear passage to the Gulf of California.

Although no additional property damage was reported, the death toll mounted to twenty-five last night with the discovery of three more bodies in the wake of the storm.

EXPECT BUCKNER TO RETIRE SOON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—(AP)—Friends here of Emory R. Buckner, United States attorney for Southern New York, expect him to retire shortly to private life.

For some time Mr. Buckner has found the duties of his office too great a physical strain and his intimates have advised him to take a rest. They would not be surprised if he stepped out very shortly after the conclusion of the Daugherty-Miller conspiracy trial he now is prosecuting in New York.

On March 1 he will have completed two years' service as United States attorney. During most of this time he had given a large share of his attention to enforcement of the prohibition laws, the New York padlock campaign having been inaugurated under his supervision.

Rev. J. D. Buckner of Lincoln, father of Emory Buckner, stated Saturday noon that his son had informed him by letter last December that he was contemplating returning from the office of United States attorney at the close of the Daugherty trial. Rev. Buckner said that his son would return to his old firm of Root, Clark, Buckner and Howland.

Shreeve of London, and Reid Zimmerman of the Omaha World-Herald, took several abbreviated foreign dispatches from Constantine Brown, correspondent for the World-Herald and the Chicago Daily News at London.

HIGHWAY BILL GIVEN FAVOR

By reporting out for the general file in the house the amended bill, H R 25, providing for a gradual increase of 20 per cent in the mileage of state and federal highways and authorizing the state engineer, with the advice of the county board in each county, to select the additional mileage after all routes heretofore laid out have been fully improved, the committee on roads and bridges Saturday paved the way for killing two or three dozen special highway bills in one grand slaughter.

This measure enables each county to continue getting its share of state highway funds after the highways designated by law have been finished, and to use the money on such other roads as may be added to the system It will be considered by the house the coming week.

No Teachers' Pension Survey.

H. R. 437, appropriating $15,000 for use by a joint legislative committee of five members in making a survey of teachers' pension (retirement) plans and reporting to the next legislature, has been reported by the finance committee for indefinite postponement.

Mr. Hovis moved to reject the report and put the bill on general file. At his request the motion was allowed to lie over without taking a vote, until the first of the week.

The same committee killed H. R 600, for an appropriation of $7,500 to eradicate smut in small grain.

A claim of Walter A Kent, Sheridan county rancher, for $1,593 on account of damages alleged to have been done by wild geese and ducks in his corn fields, was turned down by the committee on claims and deficiencies. The bill was H. R. 157.

On the Mortality List

Among other bills killed by standing committees were these:

State aid for normal training in small high schools that cannot meet present requirements. H. R. 482.

Public school superintendents, principals, and eatchers prohibited from acting as agents for text books and school supplies. H. R. 512.

Registration of title to motor vehicles in the state engineer's office, to assist in tracing stolen cars. H. R. 259.

Kansan Catches Eighty-Two Pound Catfish On Hook

WHITE CLOUD, Kas., Feb. 19.—(AP)—The White Cloud oil test and its excitement in northeast Kansas was forgotten and White Cloud had a new thrill this week when William Prebble, local garage man, came rowing home from fishing in the Missouri river with an eighty-two pound catfish which he caught on a hook.

The catfish was more than five feet long.

After being measured, photographed and viewed by about everyone in White Cloud, the fish was sold to an oil well worker for 25 cents a pound or $20.50, who loaded it into his car and left for Eldorado, Kas., where he plans to give a banquet like Jack Walton's famous feast in Oklahoma a few years ago.

PARIS APPEARS DISPOSED START PAYING ON DEBT

Poincare Apparently Favors Following Tentative Settlement Plan.

NOT EXPECTED TO RE-OPEN QUESTION

Arrangements Are To Be Handled As Purely a Treasury Matter.

PARIS, Feb. 19.—(By the Associated Press)—Although carefully avoiding re-opening the debt settlement question with Washington through diplomatic channels, Premier Poincare is understood to be disposed to begin payments to the United States under the schedule contained in the settlement.

The premier, it is said, thought that the best means of conveying an intimation of his intention to the American government was through in the United States, Robert Lacour-Gayet, rather than through the more formal channels of the foreign office

Therefore, any arrangements of this nature to be made will be handled as purely a treasury matter. This explanation came today after the foreign office had expressed surprise over a published report that a debt payment was under way, and had denied knowledge of any negotiations along that line.

Washington Silent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19 —(By the Associated Press.)—Both the treasury and the French embassy were uncommunicative today regarding Premier Poincare's overtures for an arrangement for increased French payments on her war debt to the United States.

Robert Lacour-Gayet, financial attache of the embassy, recently has been in conference with Secretary Mellon and there are indications that some definite announcement may be made shortly.

SORORITY SHORT $100 IN ACCOUNTS

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 19.—(AP)—With an audit having revealed a shortage in the accounts of the Delta Gamma sorority at the University of Wisconsin, a warrant charging embezzlement of $100 was issued today for E. B. Easton, owner of the Warner System, Inc., a fraternity financing organization.

Easton had been missing from his home here for a week. The discrepancy in the firm's accounts were noted after an audit was made at the request of the sorority. Easton offered to make good the amount, District Attorney Glen. D Roberts said, if allowed to go to Minneapolis to raise funds. He did not return.

U. S. EXPLAINS SENDING TROOPS

Although not disclosing what country is furnishing the munitions, the white house advances it as another reason, besides protection of Americans, for the recent ordering of 1,600 marines to Nicaragua.

The administration, however, links up the importaations as constituting a danger to Americans there in belief the additional equipment for liberals will inspire increased warfare.

President Adolfo Diaz of Nicaragua, has repeatedly charged Mexico is supplying with arms the liberal army of Dr. Juan B. Sacasa, claimant of the presidency.

AMERICAN GOOD WILL AVIATORS ARRIVE IN CHILE

SANTIAGO, Chile, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Two months after their start from San Antonio, Texas, the United States army aviators are nearing the end of the second division of their good will flight over Central and South American countries. Four hydro-planes arrived here last evening, almost at the same time that the fifth the San Antonio, which had been left behind at Tumaco, Colombia, until its engines could be overhauled, reached Lima, Peru

It is likely the San Antonio will join the other planes here, when the reunited squadron will proceed to Valdivia and thence turn eastward across Argentina to Bahia Blanco. Then the flight will continue northward with stops at centers in the eastern part of South America. The planes are about two weeks behind their schedule because of a series of mishaps.

WILL TAKE UP O'MALLEY BILL

Measure Outlawing Discrimination Scheduled for Monday Session.

After working in committee of the whole Saturday forenoon, advancing half a dozen bills to the third reading stage and killing two others, the lower branch of the legislature adjourned at noon to reconvene at 9 a. m. Monday.

Before starting its regular grind, the chamber adopted Mr. O'Malley's motion to fix a special order for 10 a. m. next Wednesday on H. R. 28, the amended anti-discrimination bill relating to prices paid for cream and butter fat. O'Malley will ask to have the amendment tacked on by the judiciary committee, permitting variation in prices to meet local competition, stricken off. He claims this virtually kills the measure and, if retained, would render it of no value.

Another motion was offered by Mr. O'Malley to overturn the judiciary committee's recommendation for indefinite postponement of the companion bill, H. R. 29, to govern selling prices for gasoline, oil, coal, grain, and other staple commodities handled by concerns which maintain branch agencies at different places. It will be voted upon Monday or Tuesday, when more of the members are present.

Stockmen's Bills Smothered.

Two measures sponsored by large ranchers in western and northwestern Nebraska, to relieve land owners from payment for damage done by their live stock on adjoining premises whose owners fail to keep up their fences, were put to death in committee of the whole, on motion of Mr. Heater, who insisted it would work a hardship on poor widows struggling to maintain themselves and their children on small tracts of mortgaged land.

To Aid Inland Navigation.

An appropriation of $5,000 for boosting inland waterways, including the great lakes-St. Lawrence project and the improvement of the Missouri river channel, and also to help national "farm relief" plans, embodied in H. R. 522, was advanced to third reading.

The first senate bill to be acted upon by the house was S. F. 138, authorizing the state agriculture department to promulgate rules and regulations for control and suppression of insect pests and plant diseases. It was sent to third reading, with these other proposals:

H. R. 236, raising the tax limit for street lighting in Columbus and other cities of its class, from 1 to 2 mills.

H. R. 185, requiring candidates who decline their nominations to do so thirty days before the election.

However, Dr. Lewis stated Saturday noon that White is in no immediate danger, and that he probably will recover.

Will Be Referred to Various Departments Before Chief Acts.

WASHINGTON, Feb., 19. —(I. N. S.)— The McNary-Haugen farm bill was laid on President Coolidge's desk today for veto or approval.

It will follow the usual routine of being referred to various departments before the president acts.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19. —(By the Associated Press) —The McNary-Haugen farm relief bill was placed before President Coolidge today for his approval or a veto.

Having been signed late yesterday by Vice President Dawes and Speaker Longworth, the document was sent to the White house early this morning by messenger.

The bill will be sent to the department of agriculture late today for the perusal of Secretary Jardine. The secretary has never advocated its enactment.

President Coolidge was urged to approve the bill by S. H. Thompson of Chicago, Edward O'Neill and Chester Gray of the American Farm Bureau federation.

EXPECT BUCKNER TO RETIRE SOON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Friends here of Emory R. Buckner, United States attorney for Southern New York, expect him to retire shortly to private life.

For some time Mr. Buckner has found the duties of his office too great a physical strain and his intimates have advised him to take a rest. They would not be surprised if he stepped out very shortly after the conclusion of the Daugherty-Miller conspiracy trial he now is prosecuting in New York.

On March 1 he will have completed two years' service as United States attorney. During most of this time he had given a large share of his attention to enforcement of the prohibition laws, the New York padlock campaign having been inaugurated under his supervision.

Rev. J. D. Buckner of Lincoln, father of Emory Buckner, stated Saturday noon that his son had informed him by letter last December that he was contemplating retiring from the office of United States attorney at the close of the Daugherty trial. Rev. Buckner said that his son would return to his old firm of Root, Clark, Buckner and Howland.

OMAHA, Feb. 19.—(By the Associated Press.)—Despite a sleet storm on the eastern coast of the United States, which caused a two-hour delay, the Northwestern Bell Telephone company in Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, inaugurated its trans-Atlantic service here today.

Two conversations were carried on. W. B. T. Bell, president of the telephone company, talked with Colonel H. B. Shreeve of London, and Reid Zimmerman of the Omaha World-Herald, took several abbreviated foreign dispatches from Constantine Brown, correspondent for the World-Herald and the Chicago Daily News at London.

HIGHWAY BILL GIVEN FAVOR

By reporting out for the general file in the house the amended bill, H. R. 25, providing for a gradual increase of 20 per cent in the mileage of state and federal highways and authorizing the state engineer, with the advice of the county board in each county, to select the additional mileage after all routes heretofore laid out have been fully improved, the committee on roads and bridges Saturday paved the way for killing two or three dozen special highway bills in one grand slaughter.

This measure enables each county to continue getting its share of state highway funds after the highways designated by law have been finished, and to use the money on such other roads as may be added to the system. It will be considered by the house the coming week.

No Teachers' Pension Survey.

H. R. 437, appropriating $15,000 for use by a joint legislative committee of five members in making a survey of teachers' pension (retirement) plans and reporting to the next legislature, has been reported by the finance committee for indefinite postponement.

Mr. Hovis moved to reject the report and put the bill on general file. At his request the motion was allowed to lie over without taking a vote, until the first of the week.

The same committee killed H. R. 600, for an appropriation of $7,500 to eradicate smut in small grain.

A claim of Walter A Kent, Sheridan county rancher, for $1,593 on account of damages alleged to have been done by wild geese and ducks in his corn fields, was turned down by the committee on claims and deficiencies. The bill was H. R. 457.

On the Mortality List

Among other bills killed by standing committees were these:

State aid for normal training in small high schools that cannot meet present requirements. H. R. 482.

Public school superintendents, principals, and eatchers prohibited from acting as agents for text books and school supplies. H. R. 512.

Registration of title to motor vehicles in the state engineer's office, to assist in tracing stolen cars. H. R. 259.

Kansan Catches Eighty-Two Pound Catfish On Hook

WHITE CLOUD, Kas., Feb. 19.—(AP)—The White Cloud oil test and its excitement in northeast Kansas was forgotten and White Cloud had a new thrill this week when William Prebble, local garage man, came rowing home from fishing in the Missouri river with an eighty-two pound catfish which he caught on a hook.

The catfish was more than five feet long.

After being measured, photographed and viewed by about everyone in White Cloud, the fish was sold to an oil well worker for 25 cents a pound or $20.50, who loaded it into his car and left for Eldorado, Kas., where he plans to give a banquet like Jack Walton's famous feast in Oklahoma a few years ago.

PARIS APPEARS DISPOSED START PAYING ON DEBT

Poincare Apparently Favors Following Tentative Settlement Plan.

Arrangements Are To Be Handled As Purely a Treasury Matter.

PARIS, Feb. 19.—(By the Associated Press.)—Although carefully avoiding re-opening the debt settlement question with Washington through diplomatic channels, Premier Poincare is understood to be disposed to begin payments to the United States under the schedule contained in the settlement.

The premier, it is said, thought that the best means of conveying an intimation of his intention to the American government was through in the United States, Robert Lacour, Gayet, rather than through the more formal channels of the foreign office.

Therefore, any arrangements of this nature to be made will be handled as purely a treasury matter. This explanation came today after the foreign office had expressed surprise over a published report that a debt payment was under way, and had denied knowledge of any negotiations along that line.

Washington Silent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19. —(By the Associated Press.)—Both the treasury and the French embassy were uncommunicative today regarding Premier Poincare's overtures for an arrangement for increased French paymenis on her war debt to the United States.

Robert Lacour-Gayet, financial attache of the embassy, recently has been in conference with Secretary Mellon and there are indications that some definite announcement may be made shortly.

U. S. EXPLAINS SENDING TROOPS

Although not disclosing what country is furnishing the munitions, the white house advances it as another reason, besides protection of Americans, for the recent ordering of 1,600 marines to Nicaragua.

The administration, however, links up the importaations as constituting a danger to Americans there in belief the additional equipment for liberals will inspire increased warfare.

President Adolfo Diaz of Nicaragua, has repeatedly charged Mexico is supplying with arms the liberal army of Dr. Juan B. Sacasa, claimant of the presidency.

AMERICAN GOOD WILL AVIATORS ARRIVE IN CHILE

SANTIAGO, Chile, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Two months after their start from San Antonio, Texas, the United States army aviators are nearing the end of the second division of their good will flight over Central and South American countries. Four hydro-planes arrived here last evening, almost at the same time that the fifth the San Antonio, which had been left behind at Tumaco, Colombia, until its engines could be overhauled, reached Lima, Peru.

It is likely the San Antonio will join the other planes here, when the reunited squadron will proceed to Valdivia and thence turn eastward across Argentina to Bahia Blanco. Then the flight will continue northward with stops at centers in the eastern part of South America. The planes are about two weeks behind their schedule because of a series of mishaps.

WILL TAKE UP O'MALLEY BILL

Measure Outlawing Discrimination Scheduled for Monday Session.

After working in committee of the whole Saturday forenoon, advancing half a dozen bills to the third reading stage and killing two others, the lower branch of the legislature adjourned at noon to reconvene at 9 a. m. Monday.

Before starting its regular grind, the chamber adopted Mr. O'Malley's motion to fix a special order for 10 a. m. next Wednesday on H. R. 28, the amended anti-discrimination bill relating to prices paid for cream and butter fat. O'Malley will ask to have the amendment tacked on by the judiciary committee, permitting variation in prices to meet local competition, stricken off. He claims this virtually kills the measure and, if retained, would render it of no value.

Another motion was offered by Mr. O'Malley to overturn the judiciary committee's recommendation for indefinite postponement of the companion bill, H. R. 29, to govern selling prices for gasoline, oil, coal, grain, and other staple commodities handled by concerns which maintain branch agencies at different places. It will be voted upon Monday or Tuesday, when more of the members are present.

Stockmen's Bills Smothered.

Two measures sponsored by large ranchers in western and northwestern Nebraska, to relieve land owners from payment for damage done by their live stock on adjoining premises whose owners fail to keep up their fences, were put to death in committee of the whole, on motion of Mr. Heater, who insisted it would work a hardship on poor widows struggling to maintain themselves and their children on small tracts of mortgaged land.

To Aid Inland Navigation.

An appropriation of $5,000 for boosting inland waterways, including the great lakes-St. Lawrence project and the improvement of the Missouri river channel, and also to help national "farm relief" plans, embodied in H. R. 522, was advanced to third reading.

The first senate bill to be acted upon by the house was S. F. 138, authorizing the state agriculture department to promulgate rules and regulations for control and suppression of insect pests and plant diseases. It was sent to third reading, with these other proposals:

H. R. 236, raising the tax limit for street lighting in Columbus and other cities of its class, from 1 to 2 mills.

H. R. 185, requiring candidates who decline their nominations to do so thirty days before the election.

REVISED RADIO BILL APPROVED

Coolidge Is Expected to Sign and Name Controlling Commission.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19. —(By the Associated Press.)—The last step in the enactment of radio control legislation was taken Friday by the senate after weeks of delay, without even a record vote and with less than a third of the membership present.

The pending measure, as re-written by house and senate conferees, now goes to President Coolidge, who is expected to sign it next week and to send to the senate before adjournment of congress two weeks from Friday, the names of the five men who are to make up the radio commission created by the measure.

Demands that the legislation be sent back to conference for amendment in important particulars were made in closing debate by Senators Pittman, Nevada and Blease, South Carolina, democrats, and Howell, republican, Nebraska.

The senate previously had twice refused to take this course.

Opposition Raised.

The chief point raised by opponents were that the bill failed to assert the right of the federal government to control the air for the benefit of all of the people; to provide for a waiver of rights to wave lengths and the use of the ether by licenses and to make it certain that each state will have the right to at least one of the effective wave lengths.

Under the terms of the measure, the commission of five will have complete control of radio for one year from the date of its organization and thereafter will have the power to pass final judgment on all controverted questions and all those which might be voluntarily referred to it by the secretary of commerce.

Among the other provisions are those designed to prevent monopolies; to control wave lengths; the number and power of stations; chain broadcasting; the length of time stations may broadcast and to prevent discrimination and excessive charges for radio transmission.

Gun Toter's Rule Barred By Dever At Chicago Polls

CHICAGO, Feb. 19.—(AP)— The democratic incumbent, William E. Dever, unopposed for re-nomination for mayor in next Tuesday's primary, Friday moved to assure his republican opponents a fair primary after one of the most bitterly contenested campaigns Chicago has ever seen.

"Gunmen will not run next Tuesday's election," Mayor Dever declared after a lengthy conference with Morgan A. Collins, general superintendent of police. "We will put into operation every bit of power to which the city has access.

"This election will run so every man and woman entitled to vote may do so."

The police were ordered to begin a roundup of possible troublemakers.

KILLS SELF AND ENTIRE FAMILY

Teamster Prefers Wife and 5 Children Dead, To Starving.

UTICA, N. Y., Feb. 19 (By the Associated Press.)—Rather than see his wife and five children starve to death, Guy M. Taylor, a teamster without work, killed his entire family and then ended his own life with a razor.

The tragedy was enacted probably a week ago, but did not become known until Friday, when, on the suggestion of a neighbor, the police forced an entrance into the squalid tenement occupied by the Taylors and found seven bodies.

Mrs. Taylor's throat was cut with a razor and Taylor committed suicide with the same weapon. The children were killed with a razor and a bowie knife.

The appearance of the room and the condition of the bodies indicated that all except Owen, 14, were killed as they slept. Owen apparently had struggled with his father.

Poverty was apparent when the house was entered. The food supply consisted of a little sugar and a small crust of bread. Three beds, a kitchen table, a dilapidated chair and a bench comprised the furniture. Taylor's last pay envelope was found empty in a closet. It indicated that his last pay was $23.50.

The family had apparently been a happy one Taylor spent a good part of each evening playing on his accordian while the children sang in chorus to the music. It was the absence of the music that led to yesterday's investigation. Another occupant of the building, missing the music and noticing that the shades were tightly drawn, reported to the police that he feared something was wrong.

TORNADO DEATH TOLL IS NOW 32

Nearly a Hundred Injured and Damage Over $200,000.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 19. —(By the Associated Press)— The known dead from the tornado which dipped freakishly into widely separated sections of three states Thursday night rose to thirty-two last night, with the discovery of an additional body near Pleasant Hill, La., and the drowning of a man at Alexander City, Ala.

The number of injured neared the 100 mark and property damage, largely confined to farm homes and rural buildings, passing $200,000.

Rescue workers delving through the debris of farm homes last night, faced the possibility of freezing temperatures. Winds had lost their fury, but brought with them the touch of ice. The tornado dissipated in rains and electrical storms.

Of the storm dead, twelve died in the farming community near Pleasant Hill. Eleven were known dead in Tensas parish, in the Mississippi valley. Eight were killed at Rose Hill, Miss., one man drowned at Alexander City, Ala., when his boat was upset by high winds.

The storm dipped first into the Pleasant Hill farming community, leaving thirty injured, a dozen farm houses in ruins and seventy-five to one hundred homeless. Rising, it passed eastward to the state line, where it flung a backward blow at Tensas parish.

OBJECTION MADE TO BILL CUTTING OFF SURCHARGE

Strenuous objections were raised Friday afternoon to the Jeary bill, S. F. 248, which would prohibit railroads from collecting a Pullman surcharge on Pullman and chair car fares. The bill was up for discussion before the senate railroads committee.

C. B. Steward, secretary of the Farm Bureau federation, told the committee that his organization is opposed to the bill because it is believed that if the railroads are deprived of this source of income, it will fall upon shippers of agricultural products to make up the surplus. Steward declared that the surcharge does not particularly effect farmer-shippers now since they use the special Pullman service very little.

E. L. Beverington of Chicago, chairman of the transcontinental passenger association, told the committee that if Nebraska passed the bill it would set a precedent for other states to follow.

He declared that if the revenue from this surcharge is taken from the railroads, it will result in an increase in freight rates to make up the loss. He also pointed out that several other states had tried it but that the interstate commerce commission ruled the law to be discriminatory. No action was taken on the bill by the committee.

McClaskey, publicity man, dwelt at some length on the convention and the ten day tour of Nebraska and the Black Hills which follows . The tour is routed over three railroads in Nebraska and stops will be made at Fremont, Norfolk, Long Pine, Chadron, Scottsbluff, Gering, Sidney, North Platte, Grand Island, Kearney and Hastings, with tthe final day being spent in Lincoln. It is expected that two possibly three special trains will be necessary to carry the party.

Curtis Talks at Banquet.

"Looking Ahead" was the subject of the address by John Curtiss, departmental secretary of the Lincoln chamber of commerce, before 250 members of the Press association at their banquet at the Lincoln hotel Friday evening. The editors were later entertained by the University Players in a special presentation of "Craig's Wife" at the Temple theater.

In an optimistic tone Mr. Curtiss spoke of the recent developments in the state of Nebraska and believes that the future will prove to be much brighter than the past. He urged that the editors be constructive in their viewpoints and always be loyal to their home towns. In a tribute to Lincoln, the speaker pointed out the outward signs of progress in the new buildings completed, under construction, and contemplated.

WANT DEFENSE ACT OBSERVED

Veterans' Commanders Ask Trained Citizenry And Strong Navy.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—(By the Associated Press.)—A navy second to none and a trained, equipped citizenry, as provided for under the national defense act, are demanded in a statement drafted here Friday by the commanders of all the veterans' organizations of the country.

"Our national defense must not be crippled under a plea of economy or pacifism," said the statement, which called for the immediate carrying out of the intent and spirit of the defense act and the prompt provision of sufficient appropriations to build a navy equal to that of any other country.

This was the first gathering of the veterans commanders and was called to formulate not only a declaration on the subject of national defense, but also to define the term "Americanism" for use in the public schools and generally by the people.

Define Americanism.

The definition of Americansim, as agreed upon by the conference, is:

"Americanism is an unfailing love of country, loyalty to its institutions and ideals, eagerness to defend it against all enemies, undivided allegiance to the flag and a desire to secure the blessing of liberty to ourselves and posterity."

Taking up the question of hospitalization, the commanders heard a plea for the consolidation of all agencies of the government for the relief and hospitalization of veterans of all wars under one federal head. It was agreed the commanders would report the subject to their respective organizations for action.

The conference unanimously urged congress to enact the Tyson-Fitzgerald bill for the retirement benefits for the disabled emergency army officers.

Reject Reapportionment Plan.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—(AP)— The proposal for reapportionment of house membership on the oasis of the 1930 census was rejected Friday by the house census committee. The reapportionment would have taken place after the next presidential election .

Today

Another Boy Suicide.
China's War.
Rain in California.

By Arthur Brisbane.

Another high school boy, Clark Kessler of Elizabeth, N. J., 16 years old, committed suicide, swallowing Paris green in All Saints Episcopal church.

A few hours earlier Edith M. Stewart, senior in Elmira college, poisoned herself Fourteen suicides by school boys and girls within a few days is appalling. Perhaps youth is beginning to do what it has so often contemplated.

John Stuart Mill, put to studying Greek at the age of 3, tells how as a boy he planned suicide, driven by the thought that all combinations of musical notes would one day be used up and then new musical composition would become impossible.

Bertrand Russell, commenting on Mill's experience, says: "I experienced in adolescence just the same tendency as Mill describes—in my case because I thought the laws of dynamics controlled the movements of my body, making the will a mere delusion."

Youth has strange impulses, and solemn maturity does not understand it.

Are you following China's war closely with intense interest, seeing the picture in your mind's eye? Probably not. "China" or "Mars" is about the same to the average American.

Anyhow, the north is losing, the south—winning, and defense of Shanghai, where thousands of Europeans are collected, seems in bad shape.

Let's hope Uncle Sam will manage to mind his business in any fighting that may come. We have no quarrel with China. We won't let Chinese come here to stay. Why should not they bar Europeans or Americans in China?

A heavy rain in California caused a landslide that killed men working up in the mountains for an Edison company, a boy of 7 was drowned, deaths number twenty odds. Easter newspapers devote to this not important calamity eight- column heads in big type. Building the new, big bridge across the Hudson will involve more deaths than that California storm, but that won't excite anybody. If it's California, "terrible calamity."

Mr. Schaeffer, bank president, leaves his secretary, Miss McEvoy, who worked 19 years for him, $19,000 cash and $2,500 a year. That proves Mr. Schaeffer's generosity and justice. He stipulates that Miss McEvoy must use the money for herself. That showed his wisdom. Woman's inclination is to give what she has to others. Men are rarely afflicted with that tendency.

John E. Andrus, 86 and rich, taking his first vacation in Florida, says he is proud of two things — he never hired a bootblack, never borrowed from a bank.

That is interesting, but any inhabitant of the Congo could say as much. Not to borrow from a bank is not necessarily wise, if you have a good use for the money. Wise borrowing is like harnessing a waterfall, and wisely using borrowed power.

In South Carolina a faithful hound chased a fox into a cave and was caught by rocks in a narrow passageway. Many men worked 110 hours to get him out. Willie Nelson risked his life crawling in. The animal saved, bounded into it's master's arms. "Ring" had killed the fox and everything was perfect except for the fox. He represented the "backward people," that higher civilization must wipe out, sometimes.

AUBREY CARRELL IS STATE ORATORICAL CONTEST WINNER

First place in the state old line oratorical contest held at Nebraska Wesleyan university Friday night, went to Aubrey Carrell of University Place, who won for Wesleyan its third successive state victory. Mr. Carrell's oration, "The Fourth Estate," was on the power of the American newspaper. He will represent Nebraska in the interstate contest to be held in April.

Le Roy Laase of Doane college won second place with his oration, "The Black Plague of America." Arthur Nelson of Midland was third. His oration was "The Heritage of Life."

Five state and two national championships have been won by Nebraska Wesleyan in the three years that Miss Enid Miller has been head of the department of speech. The three state old line oratorical contests and the two state peace contests were Wesleyan victories. The national peace contest in 1926 was won by Earl Raitt of Wesleyan. Miss Francis Goodhue won the national women's oratorical contest held in conjunction with the sixth biennial convention of Pi Kappa Delta at Estes Park in 1926. Miss Godohue was one of twenty-three contestants.

Other contestants in the state old line oratorical contest held at Wesleyan Friday night were, Floyd Wells, of York; Rachel Purcell of Cotner; Paul B. Newell, of Grand Island; and Lyle Ashby, of Hastings. The judges for the contest were Professor Howard Gilkinson, head of the department of public speaking at Yankton college, Yankton, S. D., Professor E. W. Lantz, of the school of education, University of Nebraska; Adrian Newens, director of the University School of Music; Professor T. S. Dunn, coach of debate, Lincoln high school; and Judge Mason Wheeler, Lincoln. Paul Copeland, president of the Nebraska Forensic league, served as chairman for the occasion.

CITY CHARTERS ARE DISCUSSED

A. R. Hatton, National Authority, Talks Here Friday Night.

"The correct or incorrect form of city government often spells failure or success for municipalities" declared A. R. Hatton in an address at the Social Science auditorium at the university Friday evening. A crowd of about 150 heard the speaker, who is one of America's foremost authorities on city charters and forms of government. He came to Lincoln under the auspices of the Lincoln League of Women Voters. Mrs. LeRoy Davis was in charge of the meeting.

Mr. Hatton is a believer in the city manager form of government. In this way only citizens of the highest character and greatest ability apply for council positions, this body being entirely legislative. It gives the council time to concentrate and investigate all legislative matters with the executive authority vested in a manager.

The man who enters the executive field, Mr. Hatton believes, is usually more capable than the member of the ordinary city commission. For, he said, this is the only type of municipal position which holds a career

The speaker also spoke of charter development and believes that the advanced charter should grant the broadest possible powers to the council and executive. First, he said, the council must be provided and elected through a thoroughly representative means. The only feasible way is by proportional representation which allows no corruption, does away with a primary and gives the whole of public opinion opportunity to select their representatives.

A charter should not set up numerous departments and specifically define their duties in Mr. Hatton's opinion. The council should have power to regulate all matters of the legislative importance and the manager should control all executive matters. The only department which should be carefully and specifically assigned is the financial department he declared. It should specify the means of raising the correct budget, levying of appropriations and other financial checeking systems.

The initiative, referendum and recall should also be embodied in a city charter, he said, to insure thorough democracy. In his opinion, the recently adopted charter of Hamilton, O is the latest word in municipal government Mr. Hatton has been the chief adviser in the establishment and drawing up of the Cleveland, O., charter and others in Rochester, N. Y, Cincinnati and Hamilton, O.

Discussing briefly the proposed change in the Lincoln charter at the evening meeting, he said it was a step in advance of the present system but was not planned to include all of the necessary essentials of a thoroughly complete and modern charter.

FINAL MOUNTAIN BARRIER MOVED

Coolidge Sets Off Blast Piercing Continental Divide.

EAST PORTAL, Colo., Feb. 19.—(By the Associated Press.)—The continental divide has been pierced

The last remaining granite of the barrier, which for ages has prevented man's progress through the Rocky mountains, was removed at 8:10 o'clock last night. Eight feet of rock separating crews, which for two and one half years have been engaged in drilling a pioneer tunnel was torn asunder by a charge of dynamite, set off from the white house at Washington, as President Coolidge touched a golden key releasing an electric spark.

While the smoke of the last charge was being cleared, a crew of muckers hastily removed the debris caused by the blast, while Gov. William H. Adams of Colorado and Mayor C. Nelson of Salt Lake City, clasped hands, joining east and west 2,300 feet beneath the towering James peak.

Coolidge Sends Message.

The original plan of having Mayor Neslen advance from West Portal to meet Governor Adams advancing from the east had to be abandoned because of its danger

The bore through the mountain is not the tunnel through the divide which is known as the Moffat tunnel, but an auxiliary or pioneer tunnel constructed to permit a more expeditious boring of the Moffat tube A distance of approximately 1,800 feet remains to be drilled before the railroad tunnel will be ready for use. This is not expected to be completed until early in July.

In addition to touching of fthe spark which made the passage through the continental divide, President Coolidge sent a message to the members of the Moffatt tunnel commission, which was read by W. P. Robinson, president of that body, and broadcast by radio from a point 9,242 feet above sea level, but still 2,300 feet beneath the top of the Rocky mountains.

COPS TELL STORY OF HARVARD RIOT

The witnesses unfolded a tale of shouting, pushing, egg and ice throwing and vigorous use of police clubs. President A. Lawrence, of Harvard, spent the forenoon in the courtroom.

Only five of the fourteen police officers who testified Friday would admit they used their clubs in trying to quell the disturbance, which started after a midnight vaudeville performance in the University theater. Each of these five said he used his club on only one student. Nine of the defendants appeared in court with bandaged heads.

STIFF LAW FOR DRUNKEN DRIVERS

Measure Providing Severe Penalties Given Approval of Lower House Friday.

If it takes strong medicine to rid public highways of drunken automobile drivers, the representative branch of the state lawmaking assembly is ready to administer the medicine It voted in committee of the whole Friday afternoon to send to third reading the Curry bill, H. R. 467, which provides a heavy cumulative penalty for operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

Anyone convicted of this offense is to be debarred for one year there after from driving, under the term of the bill. Should any person be killed, seriously maimed, or disfigured as a result of his driving, it makes the offense a felony with 3 to 10 years in the penitentiary as the specified punishment.

An amendment offered by Mr Crofoot sought to strike out the latter provision. It drew an immediate protest from the introducer.

"If we are to have any law at all on this subject let's have one that means something," urged Curry.

The house agreed with him and the amendment was rejected by a large majority

Favors Civil War Monument.

Turning its attention to the appropriation file, the chamber proceeded to put its O. K. stamp on H. R. 170, providing a fund of $5,000 to be spent under the governor's direction in making a survey and plans for a monument to civil war veterans on Capitol square.

Mr. Martin opposed the project and moved to kill the bill. This brought Messrs. Kier, McMaster, Morledge and Burr to its defense Mr. Morledge declared it an "insult" to veterans to turn the proposal down.

"As soon as anyone mentions the old soldier, it seems to be a crime for anyone to let a single brain cell work," retorted Martin. He thought it might spoil the appearance of the new capitol to stick monuments around the square in front of it.

Martin got some support for his view, but the heavy end of the vote was for the bill, and it was advanced for passage.

Animals' Names Stump Clerk

The next measure was H. R. 380 to appropriate $30,000 for taking over the Adam Breede collection of African animal trophies and mounting two elephant hides and the skin of one rhinoceros within the next biennium. Of that sum, $5,987 is to be paid to Mr. Breede as reimbursement for his expenses in tranporting and caring for the skins. If acquired by the state, they will become a part of the university museum at Lincoln.

First Assistant Clerk Harry Hassler had a hard time reading the bill when he came to such names as "dikdik", "grantlis", "gerenuks", and "kongoni".

No disposition was made of the bill and it was put over as unfinished business.

CLOSE DEFENSE FOR DAUGHERTY

All Evidence Presented In New York Conspiracy Trial.

The defense of Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general, rested Friday afternoon. It began on Thursday afternoon. Aside from the testimony showing practices in the department of justice and a legal debate between Senator Guy D. Goff of West Virginia, and United States Attorney Emory R Buckner as to the validity of claims passed by Mr. Daugherty and Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, Daugherty's defense was virtually one of character.

Neither defendant took the stand.

Daugherty and Miller, as government officials, are charged with defrauding the United States of their honest and impartial services and are alleged to have conspired with the late John T. King, then republican national committeeman from Connecticut and Jess W. Smith, Mr. Daugherty's handy man, to pass the claims for the impounded assests of the American Metals Company amounting to approximately $7,000,000. The total of the claims is the largest ever passed by an alien property custodian and was effected in three days, the government contends.

The government produced evidence tending to show that Richard Merton, German metal magnate, paid King a "fee" of $441,000 to procure allowance of his claims for the American Metals assets, which had been seized during the war as enemy owned, to the Societe Suisse Pour Valeaurs de Metaux.

The "fee" was paid $50,000 by a check and $391,000 in Liberty bonds.

Evidence also was offered to show that $49,000 of the Merton-to-King bonds, identified by their serial numbers, found their way into Miller's brokerage and banking accounts. Inferential testimony and evidence was given to show that $224,000 of these bonds were traced to Daugherty and Smith.

REVISED RADIO BILL APPROVED

Coolidge Is Expected to Sign and Name Controlling Commission.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19. —(By the Associated Press.)—The last step in the enactment of radio control legislation was taken Friday by the senate after weeks of delay, without even a record vote and with less than a third of the membership present.

The pending measure, as re-written by house and senate conferees, now goes to President Coolidge, who is expected to sign it next week and to send to the senate before adjournment of congress two weeks from Friday, the names of the five men who are to make up the radio commission created by the measure.

Demands that the legislation be sent back to conference for amendment in important particulars were made in closing debate by Senators Pittman, Nevada and Blease, South Carolina, democrats, and Howell, republican, Nebraska.

The senate previously had twice refused to take this course.

Opposition Raised.

The chief point raised by opponents were that the bill failed to assert the right of the federal government to control the air for the benefit of all of the people; to provide for a waiver of rights to wave lengths and the use of the ether by licenses and to make it certain that each state will have the right to at least one of the effective wave lengths.

Under the terms of the measure, the commission of five will have complete control of radio for one year from the date of its organization and thereafter will have the power to pass final judgment on all controverted questions and all those which might be voluntarily referred to it by the secretary of commerce.

Among the other provisions are those designed to prevent monopolies; to control wave lengths; the number and power of stations; chain broadcasting; the length of time stations may broadcast and to prevent discrimination and excessive charges for radio transmission.

Gun Toter's Rule Barred By Dever At Chicago Polls

CHICAGO, Feb. 19.—(AP)— The democratic incumbent, William E. Dever, unopposed for re-nomination for mayor in next Tuesday's primary, Friday moved to assure his republican opponents a fair primary after one of the most bitterly contenested campaigns Chicago has ever seen.

"Gunmen will not run next Tuesday's election," Mayor Dever declared after a lengthy conference with Morgan A. Collins, general superintendent of police. "We will put into operation every bit of power to which the city has access.

"This election will run so every man and woman entitled to vote may do so."

The police were ordered to begin a roundup of possible troublemakers.

KILLS SELF AND ENTIRE FAMILY

Teamster Prefers Wife and 5 Children Dead, To Starving.

UTICA, N. Y., Feb. 19.(By the Associated Press.)—Rather than see his wife and five children starve to death, Guy M. Taylor, a teamster without work, killed his entire family and then ended his own life with a razor.

The tragedy was enacted probably a week ago, but did not become known until Friday, when, on the suggestion of a neighbor, the police forced an entrance into the squalid tenement occupied by the Taylors and found seven bodies.

Mrs. Taylor's throat was cut with a razor and Taylor committed suicide with the same weapon. The children were killed with a razor and a bowie knife.

The appearance of the room and the condition of the bodies indicated that all except Owen, 14, were killed as they slept. Owen apparently had struggled with his father.

Poverty was apparent when the house was entered. The food supply consisted of a little sugar and a small crust of bread. Three beds, a kitchen table, a dilapidated chair and a bench comprised the furniture. Taylor's last pay envelope was found empty in a closet. It indicated that his last pay was $23.50.

The family had apparently been a happy one. Taylor spent a good part of each evening playing on his accordian while the children sang in chorus to the music. It was the absence of the music that led to yesterday's investigation. Another occupant of the building, missing the music and noticing that the shades were tightly drawn, reported to the police that he feared something was wrong.

TORNADO DEATH TOLL IS NOW 32

Nearly a Hundred Injured and Damage Over $200,000.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 19. —(By the Associated Press)— The known dead from the tornado which dipped freakishly into widely separated sections of three states Thursday night rose to thirty-two last night, with the discovery of an additional body near Pleasant Hill, La., and the drowning of a man at Alexander City, Ala.

The number of injured neared the 100 mark and property damage, largely confined to farm homes and rural buildings, passing $200,000.

Rescue workers delving through the debris of farm homes last night, faced the possibility of freezing temperatures. Winds had lost their fury, but brought with them the touch of ice. The tornado dissipated in rains and electrical storms.

Of the storm dead, twelve died in the farming community near Pleasant Hill. Eleven were known dead in Tensas parish, in the Mississippi valley. Eight were killed at Rose Hill, Miss., one man drowned at Alexander City, Ala., when his boat was upset by high winds.

The storm dipped first into the Pleasant Hill farming community, leaving thirty injured, a dozen farm houses in ruins and seventy-five to one hundred homeless. Rising, it passed eastward to the state line, where it flung a backward blow at Tensas parish.

OBJECTION MADE TO BILL CUTTING OFF SURCHARGE

Strenuous objections were raised Friday afternoon to the Jeary bill, S. F. 248, which would prohibit railroads from collecting a Pullman surcharge on Pullman and chair car fares. The bill was up for discussion before the senate railroads committee.

C. B. Steward, secretary of the Farm Bureau federation, told the committee that his organization is opposed to the bill because it is believed that if the railroads are deprived of this source of income, it will fall upon shippers of agricultural products to make up the surplus. Steward declared that the surcharge does not particularly effect farmer-shippers now since they use the special Pullman service very little.

E. L. Beverington of Chicago, chairman of the transcontinental passenger association, told the committee that if Nebraska passed the bill it would set a precedent for other states to follow.

He declared that if the revenue from this surcharge is taken from the railroads, it will result in an increase in freight rates to make up the loss. He also pointed out that several other states had tried it but that the interstate commerce commission ruled the law to be discriminatory. No action was taken on the bill by the committee.

Other services credited to the Beacon were: starting move to get more bridges across the Missouri; backing local highway improvements and being instrumental in getting the Harding highway through Eagle; giving cups to boys and girls clubs for leadership in agricultural activities.

Tell of N. E. A. Tour.

Most of the Friday afternoon session was taken up with the discussion of the National Editorial association convention to be held at Omaha in June. Field manager Buck and G. D. McClaskey, publicity man, dwelt at some length on the convention and the ten day tour of Nebraska and the Black Hills which follows . The tour is routed over three railroads in Nebraska and stops will be made at Fremont, Norfolk, Long Pine, Chadron, Scottsbluff, Gering, Sidney, North Platte, Grand Island, Kearney and Hastings, with the final day being spent in Lincoln. It is expected that two possibly three special trains will be necessary to carry the party.

Explanation of the compensation law was given by Commissioner Frank A. Kennedy. Mr. Kennedy asked the cooperation of the editors in informing the people about the law and telling them when and where they should apply for aid they are entitled to, in case of accident or death while working.

A. B .Wood of Gering presented the findings of the resolutions committee and they were adopted by the assembly.

Curtis Talks at Banquet.

"Looking Ahead" was the subject of the address by John Curtiss, departmental secretary of the Lincoln chamber of commerce, before 250 members of the Press association at their banquet at the Lincoln hotel Friday evening. The editors were later entertained by the University Players in a special presentation of "Craig's Wife" at the Temple theater.

In an optimistic tone Mr. Curtiss spoke of the recent developments in the state of Nebraska and believes that the future will prove to be much brighter than the past. He urged that the editors be constructive in their viewpoints and always be loyal to their home towns. In a tribute to Lincoln, the speaker pointed out the outward signs of progress in the new buildings completed, under construction, and contemplated.

WANT DEFENSE ACT OBSERVED

Veterans' Commanders Ask Trained Citizenry And Strong Navy.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—(By the Associated Press.)—A navy second to none and a trained, equipped citizenry, as provided for under the national defense act, are demanded in a statement drafted here Friday by the commanders of all the veterans' organizations of the country.

"Our national defense must not be crippled under a plea of economy or pacifism," said the statement, which called for the immediate carrying out of the intent and spirit of the defense act and the prompt provision of sufficient appropriations to build a navy equal to that of any other country.

This was the first gathering of the veterans commanders and was called to formulate not only a declaration on the subject of national defense, but also to define the term "Americanism" for use in the public schools and generally by the people.

Define Americanism.

The definition of Americansim, as agreed upon by the conference, is:

"Americanism is an unfailing love of country, loyalty to its institutions and ideals, eagerness to defend it against all enemies, undivided allegiance to the flag and a desire to secure the blessing of liberty to ourselves and posterity."

Taking up the question of hospitalization, the commanders heard a plea for the consolidation of all agencies of the government for the relief and hospitalization of veterans of all wars under one federal head. It was agreed the commanders would report the subject to their respective organizations for action.

The conference unanimously urged congress to enact the Tyson-Fitzgerald bill for the retirement benefits for the disabled emergency army officers.

Reject Reapportionment Plan.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—(AP)— The proposal for reapportionment of house membership on the basis of the 1930 census was rejected Friday by the house census committee. The reapportionment would have taken place after the next presidential election .

Today

Another Boy Suicide.
China's War.
Rain in California.

By Arthur Brisbane.

Another high school boy, Clark Kessler of Elizabeth, N. J., 16 years old, committed suicide, swallowing Paris green in All Saints Episcopal church.

A few hours earlier Edith M. Stewart, senior in Elmira college, poisoned herself Fourteen suicides by school boys and girls within a few days is appalling. Perhaps youth is beginning to do what it has so often contemplated.

John Stuart Mill, put to studying Greek at the age of 3, tells how as a boy he planned suicide, driven by the thought that all combinations of musical notes would one day be used up and then new musical composition would become impossible.

Bertrand Russell, commenting on Mill's experience, says: "I experienced in adolescence just the same tendency as Mill describes—in my case because I thought the laws of dynamics controlled the movements of my body, making the will a mere delusion."

Youth has strange impulses, and solemn maturity does not understand it.

Are you following China's war closely with intense interest, seeing the picture in your mind's eye? Probably not. "China" or "Mars" is about the same to the average American.

Anyhow, the north is losing, the south winning, and defense of Shanghai, where thousands of Europeans are collected, seems in bad shape.

Let's hope Uncle Sam will manage to mind his business in any fighting that may come. We have no quarrel with China. We won't let Chinese come here to stay. Why should not they bar Europeans or Americans in China?

A heavy rain in California caused a landslide that killed men working up in the mountains for an Edison company, a boy of 7 was drowned, deaths number twenty odds. Easter newspapers devote to this not important calamity eight- column heads in big type. Building the new big bridge across the Hudson will involve more deaths than that California storm, but that won't excite anybody. If it's California, "terrible calamity."

Mr. Schaeffer, bank president, leaves his secretary, Miss McEvoy, who worked 19 years for him, $19,000 cash and $2,500 a year. That proves Mr. Schaeffer's generosity and justice. He stipulates that Miss McEvoy must use the money for herself. That showed his wisdom. Woman's inclination is to give what she has to others. Men are rarely afflicted with that tendency.

John E. Andrus, 86 and rich, taking his first vacation in Florida, says he is proud of two things — he never hired a bootblack, never borrowed from a bank.

That is interesting, but any inhabitant of the Congo could say as much. Not to borrow from a bank is not necessarily wise, if you have a good use for the money. Wise borrowing is like harnessing a waterfall, and wisely using borrowed power.

In South Carolina a faithful hound chased a fox into a cave and was caught by rocks in a narrow passageway. Many men worked 110 hours to get him out. Willie Nelson risked his life crawling in. The animal saved, bounded into it's master's arms. "Ring" had killed the fox and everything was perfect except for the fox. He represented the "backward people," that higher civilization must wipe out, sometimes.

AUBREY CARRELL IS STATE ORATORICAL CONTEST WINNER

First place in the state old line oratorical contest held at Nebraska Wesleyan university Friday night, went to Aubrey Carrell of University Place, who won for Wesleyan its third successive state victory. Mr. Carrell's oration, "The Fourth Estate," was on the power of the American newspaper. He will represent Nebraska in the interstate contest to be held in April.

Le Roy Laase of Doane college won second place with his oration, "The Black Plague of America." Arthur Nelson of Midland was third. His oration was "The Heritage of Life."

Five state and two national championships have been won by Nebraska Wesleyan in the three years that Miss Enid Miller has been head of the department of speech. The three state old line oratorical contests and the two state peace contests were Wesleyan victories. The national peace contest in 1925 was won by Earl Raitt of Wesleyan. Miss Francis Goodhue won the national women's oratorical contest held in conjunction with the sixth biennial convention of Pi Kappa Delta at Estes Park in 1926. Miss Godohue was one of twenty-three contestants.

Other contestants in the state old line oratorical contest held at Wesleyan Friday night were, Floyd Wells, of York; Rachel Purcell of Cotner; Paul B. Newell, of Grand Island; and Lyle Ashby, of Hastings. The judges for the contest were Professor Howard Gilkinson, head of the department of public speaking at Yankton college, Yankton, S. D., Professor E. W. Lantz, of the school of education, University of Nebraska; Adrian Newens, director of the University School of Music; Professor T. S. Dunn, coach of debate, Lincoln high school; and Judge Mason Wheeler, Lincoln. Paul Copeland, president of the Nebraska Forensic league, served as chairman for the occasion.

A. R. Hatton, National Authority, Talks Here Friday Night.

"The correct or incorrect form of city government often spells failure or success for municipalities" declared A. R. Hatton in an address at the Social Science auditorium at the university Friday evening. A crowd of about 150 heard the speaker, who is one of America's foremost authorities on city charters and forms of government. He came to Lincoln under the auspices of the Lincoln League of Women Voters. Mrs. LeRoy Davis was in charge of the meeting.

Mr. Hatton is a believer in the city manager form of government. In this way only citizens of the highest character and greatest ability apply for council positions, this body being entirely legislative. It gives the council time to concentrate and investigate all legislative matters with the executive authority vested in a manager.

The man who enters the executive field, Mr. Hatton believes, is usually more capable than the member of the ordinary city commission. For, he said, this is the only type of municipal position which holds a career.

The speaker also spoke of charter development and believes that the advanced charter should grant the broadest possible powers to the council and executive. First, he said, the council must be provided and elected through a thoroughly representative means. The only feasible way is by proportional representation which allows no corruption, does away with a primary and gives the whole of public opinion opportunity to select their representatives.

A charter should not set up numerous departments and specifically define their duties in Mr. Hatton's opinion. The council should have power to regulate all matters of the legislative importance and the manager should control all executive matters. The only department which should be carefully and specifically assigned is the financial department he declared. It should specify the means of raising the correct budget, levying of appropriations and other financial checeking systems.

The initiative, referendum and recall should also be embodied in a city charter, he said, to insure thorough democracy. In his opinion, the recently adopted charter of Hamilton, O. is the latest word in municipal government. Mr. Hatton has been the chief adviser in the establishment and drawing up of the Cleveland, O., charter and others in Rochester, N. Y., Cincinnati and Hamilton, O.

Discussing briefly the proposed change in the Lincoln charter at the evening meeting, he said it was a step in advance of the present system but was not planned to include all of the necessary essentials of a thoroughly complete and modern charter.

FINAL MOUNTAIN BARRIER MOVED

Coolidge Sets Off Blast Piercing Continental Divide.

EAST PORTAL, Colo., Feb. 19.—(By the Associated Press.)—The continental divide has been pierced.

The last remaining granite of the barrier, which for ages has prevented man's progress through the Rocky mountains, was removed at 8:10 o'clock last night. Eight feet of rock separating crews, which for two and one half years have been engaged in drilling a pioneer tunnel was torn asunder by a charge of dynamite, set off from the white house at Washington as President Coolidge touched a golden key releasing an electric spark.

While the smoke of the last charge was being cleared, a crew of muckers hastily removed the debris caused by the blast, while Gov. William H. Adams of Colorado and Mayor C. Nelson of Salt Lake City, clasped hands, joining east and west 2,300 feet beneath the towering James peak.

Coolidge Sends Message.

The original plan of having Mayor Neslen advance from West Portal to meet Governor Adams advancing from the east had to be abandoned because of its danger.

The bore through the mountain is not the tunnel through the divide which is known as the Moffat tunnel, but an auxiliary or pioneer tunnel constructed to permit a more expeditious boring of the Moffat tube. A distance of approximately 1,800 feet remains to be drilled before the railroad tunnel will be ready for use. This is not expected to be completed until early in July.

In addition to touching of fthe spark which made the passage through the continental divide, President Coolidge sent a message to the members of the Moffatt tunnel commission, which was read by W. P. Robinson, president of that body, and broadcast by radio from a point 9,242 feet above sea level, but still 2,300 feet beneath the top of the Rocky mountains.

COPS TELL STORY OF HARVARD RIOT

The witnesses unfolded a tale of shouting, pushing, egg and ice throwing and vigorous use of police clubs. President A. Lawrence, of Harvard, spent the forenoon in the courtroom.

Only five of the fourteen police officers who testified Friday would admit they used their clubs in trying to quell the disturbance, which started after a midnight vaudeville performance in the University theater. Each of these five said he used his club on only one student. Nine of the defendants appeared in court with bandaged heads.

STIFF LAW FOR DRUNKEN DRIVERS

Measure Providing Severe Penalties Given Approval of Lower House Friday.

If it takes strong medicine to rid public highways of drunken automobile drivers, the representative branch of the state lawmaking assembly is ready to administer the medicine. It voted in committee of the whole Friday afternoon to send to third reading the Curry bill, H. R. 467, which provides a heavy cumulative penalty for operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

Anyone convicted of this offense is to be debarred for one year there after from driving, under the term of the bill. Should any person be killed, seriously maimed, or disfigured as a result of his driving, it makes the offense a felony with 3 to 10 years in the penitentiary as the specified punishment.

An amendment offered by Mr Crofoot sought to strike out the latter provision. It drew an immediate protest from the introducer.

"If we are to have any law at all on this subject let's have one that means something," urged Curry.

The house agreed with him and the amendment was rejected by a large majority.

Favors Civil War Monument.

Turning its attention to the appropriation file, the chamber proceeded to put its O. K. stamp on H. R. 170, providing a fund of $5,000 to be spent under the governor's direction in making a survey and plans for a monument to civil war veterans on Capitol square.

Mr. Martin opposed the project and moved to kill the bill. This brought Messrs. Kier, McMaster, Moriedge and Burr to its defense. Mr. Morledge declared it an "insult" to veterans to turn the proposal down.

"As soon as anyone mentions the old soldier, it seems to be a crime for anyone to let a single brain cell work," retorted Martin. He thought it might spoil the appearance of the new capitol to stick monuments around the square in front of it.

Martin got some support for his view, but the heavy end of the vote was for the bill, and it was advanced for passage.

Animals' Names Stump Clerk

The next measure was H. R. 380 to appropriate $30,000 for taking over the Adam Breede collection of African animal trophies and mounting two elephant hides and the skin of one rhinoceros within the next biennium. Of that sum, $5,987 is to be paid to Mr. Breede as reimbursement for his expenses in tranporting and caring for the skins. If acquired by the state, they will become a part of the university museum at Lincoln.

First Assistant Clerk Harry Hassler had a hard time reading the bill when he came to such names as "dikdik", "grantiis", "gerenuks", and "kongoni".

No disposition was made of the bill and it was put over as unfinished business.

CLOSE DEFENSE FOR DAUGHERTY

All Evidence Presented In New York Conspiracy Trial.

The defense of Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general, rested Friday afternoon. It began on Thursday afternoon. Aside from the testimony showing practices in the department of justice and a legal debate between Senator Guy D. Goff of West Virginia, and United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner as to the validity of claims passed by Mr. Daugherty and Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, Daugherty's defense was virtually one of character.

Neither defendant took the stand.

Daugherty and Miller, as government officials, are charged with defrauding the United States of their honest and impartial services and are alleged to have conspired with the late John T. King, then republican national committeeman from Connecticut and Jess W. Smith, Mr. Daugherty's handy man, to pass the claims for the impounded assests of the American Metals Company amounting to approximately $7,000,000. The total of the claims is the largest ever passed by an alien property custodian and was effected in three days, the government contends.

The government produced evidence tending to show that Richard Merton, German metal magnate, paid King a "fee" of $441,000 to procure allowance of his claims for the American Metals assets, which had been seized during the war as enemy owned, to the Societe Suisse Pour Valeaurs de Metaux.

The "fee" was paid $50,000 by a check and $391,000 in Liberty bonds.

Evidence also was offered to show that $49,000 of the Merton-to-King bonds, identified by their serial numbers, found their way into Miller's brokerage and banking accounts. Inferential testimony and evidence was given to show that $224,000 of these bonds were traced to Daugherty and Smith.

AMERICAN WIFE OF PILOT IN CHINA TELLS OF FIGHT

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Mrs. Mae B. Hawley, Los Angeles, wife of D. B. Hawley, pilot on the Yangtze river, who arrived on Japanese liner Tenyo maru, today told of a six day brush with Cantonese troops as her husband's craft steamed down the river bearing nine missionaries and fifteen children to safety.

It was necessary for passengers to lie on the bridge of the vessel to escape bullets, she said. Two members of the crew were killed.

At one point the ship was to have stopped for inspection of her $1,000,000 cargo. Soldiers camouflaged plans to attack the boat by presence of thousands of children on the river bank. As the boat was about to dock these children withdrew and machine guns started firing. Hawley ordered the craft full speed ahead and it escaped.

DAVENPORT GIRL COMMITS SUICIDE AFTER REPRIMAND

DAVENPORT, Feb. 19.— (AP) — Angered because her grandmother reprimanded her for singing at the dinner table last night, instead of saying grace, Blanche Cabathuler, 15-year-old high school student, rushed from the house and hurled herself in front of a freight train. She was instantly killed.

The Cabathuler girl's death is the second student suicide in Davenport within a week. Several days ago, George W. Cannon, jr., 16-year old literary genius, ended his life in his room by gas after penning a farewell note in which he declared death "was a glorious adventure."

TAKES SLAP AT BOOZE METHODS

Chappell Dismisses Charge When Officer Admits Drinking Hooch.

Municipal Judge Chappell took a slap at liquor law enforcement methods Saturday when he dismissed Frank Doxey, colored, who was given a hearing on a charge of sale of liquor.

Doxey testified that two state law enforcement officers begged him to buy them a pint of liquor, and that they drank half the pint with Doxey at the latter's home. The officers were J. C. Kerns, 504 North Fourteenth, who denied drinking, and Joe Allen, 1452 O street, who admitted it. Kerns said he is still an officer, but Allen said he is not. Both were employed by the state sheriff at the time of Doxey's arrest.

In dismissing Doxey, Judge Chappell said: "I tremble for my country if law enforcement officers take part in the violation of the law. This court believes in enforcement of the law to the hilt, but it cannot sanction this kind of 'illegal conspiracy.'"

Doxey declared he bought the liquor from another man, whose car, loaded with liquor, was parked outside the house while the two officers were inside. "Why didn't the officers go to the source of the supply, instead of allowing Doxey to purchase it for them?" was the question asked, and unanswered, by Francis Robinson, attorney for the defendant. Doxey testified that he was given $3 by the officers and that he gave $3 to the bootlegger.

Kerns, the officer, testified in court that he is being paid a salary by the state sheriff's office, but Judge Chappell produced a slip with State Sheriff Condit's notation that Kerns is paid according to the number of liquor "buys" he makes. Allen said he was paid on the same basis.

Judge Chappell also produced a claim for $10, purporting to be a bill for a fee of $5 each to Kerns and Allen, for their work in buying the liquor from Doxey.

The court's disposition of the case was the dismissal of the defendant, recommendation that the $10 claim be denied, and a recommendation to the state sheriff that Kerns be discharged.

Film Leads Young American Attempt To End Own Life

PARIS, Feb. 19.—(AP)— Leslie Leon, young American dentist, was in a hospital in a critical condition today after an attempt at suicide during a showing of a moton picture last night in which the English actor, Warwick Ward, was the star.

Letters which Leon is declared to have written to friends, charge Ward with opposing a reconciliation between the dentist and his wife, between whom divorce proceedings are pending, but Ward, who is in Paris, denied the allegation. He said his trouble with Leon arose from a debt which the dentist owed his (Ward's) brother.

The film which so much excited Leon that he attempted his own life, was a tragedy called "Varieties," in which Ward played the part of villain who enticed a young wife from her faithful husband.

Leon's friends said today that Leon believed Ward, acting his film role in real life, had last year induced the dentist's wife, who was formerly Ronce Ricci, to leave her husband and accompany Ward to Berlin, where the principal scenes of the film are laid.

Leon, it appears, is a Frenchman who went to America and later to Indo-China to build up a fortune for his beautiful young wife. When he failed, friends say, his wife left him.

The film is that which has been exhibited in the United States under the title "Variety," starring Emil Jannings.

Stage Censorship And Scopes Trial Called Parallel

"In Tennessee they thought if you kept the people ignorant you would save their souls," said Mr. Hays, who was one of the defense counsel in the Scopes evolution trial. "In New York some people think that if you keep people ignorant you will save their morals."

Mr. Hays, counsel for Horace Liveright, prospective producer for "The Captive," closed in the police crusade against objectionable shows, today contemplated application for an injunction to protect the play if produced by his client.

Chicago Gangsters Captured Without a Fight By Officers

CHICAGO, Feb. 19.—(A. P.)—A right hand man and two adherents of Joseph ("Polack Joe") Saltis, reputed bad man, co-leader with Frank McErlane, now on trial, for murder in Valparaiso, Ind., dropped into a police net Friday afternoon after an automobile chase through the streets and a siege which promised gun play and bloodshed.

At the end the three surrendered tamely enough, much to the disappointment of newspaper reporters and photographers, who hurriedly had buckled on their bullet proof vests and dashed to the scene of the siege upon first police flashes that Saltis and a dozen pals were standing off the first group of officers while reinforcements hurried to their assistance.

The battle which might have been had its inception when a detective squad rushing the southwest side sighted two "high priced and high powered" automobiles carrying Frank "Lefty" Koncil, recently acquitted with Saltis of the murder of John "Mitter" Foely, and other suspicious looking occupants.

The alleged gangsters stepped on accelerators when the detectives hailed them and, taking advantage of the speed of their machines, momentarily escaped and took refuge in a small frame store formerly used as a saloon.

The detectives deployed to prevent their quarry leaving by back or side doors, after collecting three pistols abandoned in the gangster automobiles and quickly word spread that southside gunmen and deectives were about to wage a fight to the death.

The only action came, however, when Koncil dashed from the beleagured grocery to a neighboring house where he was taken without the firing of a shot. His companions remained in the grocery and submitted to arrest, four detective squads meanwhile having appeared.

WAVE OF COLD PASSES, LEAVING 6 DEAD IN WAKE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 19. —(AP)—Leaving a toll of six deaths and much damage in its wake, the cold wave which swept the mountain south and the southwest last night was rapidly passing from the territory, excepting Texas, with prospects of a generally fair day today and mounting temperatures.

Texas, however, where a sixty mile gale from the northwest brought heavy damage Friday, was due for the coldest weather of the winter last night.

Two more deaths were added to the toll of snow slides in the Rocky mountain region when a snowslide Friday carried away the tramway station of the Sunnyside mine at Durango, Colo. Fear was held that others might have lost their lives. Four were killed Thursday and Wednesday in snowslides near Price, Utah.

Montana was wintry yesterday with zero and cloudy weather at Havre, and 30 above zero and snow at Helena. Wyoming was mild, the predicted cold wave having jumped over into Nebraska. The blizzard had subsided in Colorado.

MILITARY DRILL MERITS ARGUED

Measure Would Abolish Compulsory Feature Of Training Only.

For three hours opponents and friends of compulsory military training at the University of Nebraska spiritedly debated this question before the education committee of the house of representatives and an audience of about 200 persons in the house chamber Friday night. At the end of this time Chairman Troy L. Davis called a halt to this open hearing on H. R. 500 although there were still a number of persons in the audience who wished to be heard.

The proponents of this measure were first given 45 minutes in which to present their argument. Representative Frank Wells of Jefferson county, who proposed this measure introduced Rev. Ervine Inglis, T. F. A. Williams, Mrs. Clara B. Clayton, Homer Kyle and J. P. Moredick as speakers for the measure which reads as follows:

"Military training in the University of Nebraska shall be optional with the students and not a compulsory requirement for graduation."

Objects To Philosophy.

Rev. Mr. Inglis declared that the objection was not to the drill feature but to the fact that under the conditions in which it is offered the students are compelled to submit to the philosophy that "war is necessary and unavoidable and cannot be prevented.' Over 29,000 voters have signed the petition circulated by the committee of 100 so that a referendum vote can be forced, he declared.

Mr. Williams, Lincoln attorney, read from the R. O. T. C. manual quotations which he said prove that the instructors have the military philosophy that "force is the ultimate power" inculcated in them and will impart this attitude of students whether the manual is used or not.

In his rebuttal Mr. Williams represented himself as a "middle of the roader" not necessarily favoring passage of H. R. 500. He proposed instead that the legislature by resolution seek to have the university authorities work out some plan along conservative lines which would not work to the detriment of the school. He said he had reason to believe that the university authorities were willing to make some concession in regard to this question.

Mrs. Clayton, speaking for women who signed the petition, said that "until the people of all nations shall have learned to think peace there shall be no peace."

Homer Kyle, Lincoln attorney, talked on legal phases from the viewpoint of compulsory drill opponents, declaring that the Morrill land grant act makes a military training course required but not compulsory to all students. He objected to control which he claims the war department unrightfully exercises in the university through absolute control of the military department.

Mr. Moredick appeared as a representative forthe Big Four railroad brotherhoods of this state who adopted a resolution opposing compulsory drill. This stand is taken because this drill is "training for war," he stated.

Speak Against Bill.

Marcus Poteet, as a representative of the American Legion introduced the following speakers who opposed H. R. 500: C. C. Fraizer, state commander of the legion; Frank D. Eager of Lincoln; E. B. Chappell, Lincoln municipal court judge, and Mrs. C. E. McGlasson, Lincoln.

Mr. Poteet declared that the present agitation is not striving at "compulsory" military training but at all military training and said that he spoke on behalf of the boys who were "murdered" by the American people during the World war and of the children who may have to enter another war.

"We of the American Legion know that war is not glorious but we know that we must have an adequate national defense system," declared Commander Fraizer in his plea that nothing be done to hinder "our very modest defense system."

Any weakening of the R. O. T. C. system at the university is an opening wedge for weakening of the entire national defense system he declared. He also presented the argument that academic subjects at the university, such as English and history, are compulsory just as much as is military training.

Mr. Eager declared the issue is a national one which has "its bed over in Russia." The movement is directed at the National Defense act and is not concerned with giving the university students any more freedom of choice in selecting courses as proponents often claim in Mr. Eager's opinion.

Judge Chappell declared that compulsion did not work to the disadvantage of working students and as proof cited the fact that he attended the university and secured a degree without taking military training because he had to work. The legislature has acted on drill by passing and approving the Morrill land grant act he believes.

Mrs. McGlasson told of the action taken by representatives of twenty-nine women's patriotic organizations representing two million women in favoring military training on the grounds that peace will come only through preparedness. The actual training is of great benefit to the student she believes.

Eight or ten other persons took part in the open debate which concluded the hearing.

AMERICA'S OIL SUPPLY AMPLE, OSBORN FEELS

CHICAGO, Feb. 19. —(AP)— The untested oil lands of this country are far too great and the improved methods of finding and producing oil are too promising to permit alarm over possible future shortage of crude oil, in the opinion of Campbell Osborn of Ponca City, Okla., economist for the Marland Oil Co.

More efficient production and use of oil is the best means of conservation and is the next step to be taken, said an address by Mr. Osborn read before the midwest power conference here Friday by N. H. Sangor of Chicago. Mr. Osborn was unable to attend.

"Each year the prediction is made that the peak of production for petroleum has passed," he said, "and that the time is close when fuel oil will be so high it can no longer compete with coal. Last year it was said crude oil output would be far less than it was in 1925.

"I believe that the output in 1927, on the basis of present prices, will exceed 1926; that the peak production will ultimately be determined by peak demand and that is many years away."

Referring to the uses of fuel oil and gasoline, Mr. Osborn said a New York engineer estimated that fuel oil would compete equally with gasoline on a price basis, when a total yield of 42.5 per cent of gasoline by combined cracking, skimming and blending methods is reached. "And at this point," he declared, "the inefficient use of fuel oil will vanish."

EASTRIDGE CLUB SHOWS GROWTH DURING THE YEAR

Guy Hunt, R. S. Johnson and E. R. Heiny were elected to the board of directors of the Eastridge Country club at its annaul meeting at the club house Friday evening. The audit of the club's expenditures and income for the past year was read and approved, and a general review of the improvements and development during 1926 was given by directors.

The past year has proved a banner one in the life of the Eastridge club. Improvements include a large swimming pool, spacious dining and ball rooms, locker rooms for both ladies and men, showers, a modern kitchen, a grill room and other attractive features. Although not entirely paid for a large part of the construction cost was met with the completion of the building.

Plans for additional financing and other general plans for 1927 will be discussed by the board of directors when it meets early next week. Membership in the club, it was reported increased 122, swelling the total to around 430. President Howard Hadley presided over the meeting.

More absorbent—
Discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

FEW women today cling to the old-time "sanitary pad"—risky and uncertain—because of a new way called KOTEX.

It ends the embarrassment of laundry and disposal. You discard Kotex as easily as tissue.

Five times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads. Thus you wear sheer gowns and gay frocks under the most trying conditions.

Also deodorizes, and thus ends all fear of offending. 80% better class women now use it. Doctors widely urge it. Most hospitals employ it.

Costs only a few cents for a package of 12 at any drug or department store. Be sure you get the genuine KOTEX, for only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

It was necessary for passengers to lie on the bridge of the vessel to escape bullets, she said. Two members of the crew were killed.

At one point the ship was to have stopped for inspection of her $1,000,000 cargo. Soldiers camouflaged plans to attack the boat by presence of thousands of children on the river bank. PROBE CONTINUED FOR DEATH CAUSE

Brain and Heart Of Mayor Werber Are Sent To Medical College.

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., Feb., 19.—(AP)—The brain and heart of the late Mayor James E. Werber, of Sargent, were removed from his body at Sargent Friday evening by Drs. Koefoot of Broken Bow, and C. H. Fenstermacher, of Sargent, and sent to the state medical college at Omaha, in further effort to find the cause of death on February 7. The body was then removed from the undertaking establishment and reinterred late Friday night. Further developments are not publicly known at Sargent, it was stated early Saturday.

DAVENPORT GIRL COMMITS SUICIDE AFTER REPRIMAND

DAVENPORT, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Angered because her grandmother reprimanded her for singing at the dinner table last night, instead of saying grace, Blanche Cabathuler, 15-year-old-high school student, rushed from the house and hurled herself in front of a freight train. She was instantly killed.

"You will never scold me again," she declared, as she left the house.

The Cabathuler girl's death is the second student suicide in Davenport within a week. Several days ago, George W. Cannon, jr., 16-year old literary genius, ended his life in his room by gas after penning a farewell note in which he declared death "was a glorious adventure."

SUICIDE CLUB HAS 'SUCCESSFUL YEAR'

ZURICH, Feb. 19.—(I. N. S.)—"The Suicide Club" which was organized in this city a little more than a year ago, has just published a very successful report of its annual work. It has dealt with six hundred "candidates" for suicide, two of whom had already tried to end their lives twice before. In all cases, the desperate ones have been prevented from killing themselves.

Members of the club believe that misery is the cause of the largest number of suicides and urges everyone to report a likely case.

TAKES SLAP AT BOOZE METHODS

Municipal Judge Chappell took a slap at liquor law enforcement methods Saturday when he dismissed Frank Doxey, colored, who was given a hearing on a charge of sale of liquor.

Doxey testified that two state law enforcement officers begged him to buy them a pint of liquor, and that they drank half the pint with Doxey at the latter's home. The officers were J. C. Kerns, 504 North Fourteenth, who denied drinking, and Joe Allen, 1452 O street, who admitted it. Kerns said he is still an officer, but Allen said he is not. Both were employed by the state sheriff at the time of Doxey's arrest.

In dismissing Doxey, Judge Chappell said: "I tremble for my country if law enforcement officers take part in the violation of the law. This court believes in enforcement of the law to the hilt, but it cannot sanction this kind of 'illegal conspiracy.'"

Doxey declared he bought the liquor from another man, whose car, loaded with liquor, was parked outside the house while the two officers were inside. "Why didn't the officers go to the source of the supply, instead of allowing Doxey to purchase it for them?" was the question asked, and unanswered, by Francis Robinson, attorney for the defendant. Doxey testified that he was given $3 by the officers and that he gave $3 to the bootlegger.

Kerns, the officer, testified in court that he is being paid a salary by the state sheriff's office, but Judge Chappell produced a slip with State Sheriff Condit's notation that Kerns is paid according to the number of liquor "buys" he makes. Allen said he was paid on the same basis.

Judge Chappell also produced a claim for $10, purporting to be a bill for a fee of $5 each to Kerns and Allen, for their work in buying the liquor from Doxey.

The court's disposition of the case was the dismissal of the defendant, recommendation that the $10 claim be denied, and a recommendation to the state sheriff that Kerns be discharged.

PARIS, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Leslie Leon, young American dentist, was in a hospital in a critical condition today after an attempt at suicide during a showing of a moton picture last night in which the English actor, Warwick Ward, was the star.

Letters which Leon is declared to have written to friends, charge Ward with opposing a reconciliation between the dentist and his wife, between whom divorce proceedings are pending, but Ward, who is in Paris, denied the allegation. He said his trouble with Leon arose from a debt which the dentist owed his (Ward's) brother.

The film which so much excited Leon that he attempted his own life, was a tragedy called "Varieties," in which Ward played the part of villain who enticed a young wife from her faithful husband.

Leon's friends said today that Leon believed Ward, acting his film role in real life, had last year induced the dentist's wife, who was formerly Ronce Ricci, to leave her husband and accompany Ward to Berlin, where the principal scenes of the film are laid.

Leon, it appears, is a Frenchman who went to America and later to Indo-China to build up a fortune for his beautiful young wife. When he failed, friends say, his wife left him.

The film is that which has been exhibited in the United States under the title "Variety," starring Emil Jannings.

Stage Censorship And Scopes Trial Called Parallel

"In Tennessee they thought if you kept the people ignorant you would save their souls," said Mr. Hays, who was one of the defense counsel in the Scopes evolution trial. "In New York some people think that if you keep people ignorant you will save their morals."

Mr. Hays, counsel for Horace Liveright, prospective producer for "The Captive," closed in the police crusade against objectionable shows, today contemplated application for an injunction to protect the play if produced by his client.

Chicago Gangsters Captured Without a Fight By Officers

CHICAGO, Feb. 19.—(A. P.)—A right hand man and two adherents of Joseph ("Polack Joe") Saltis, reputed bad man, co-leader with Frank McErlane, now on trial, for murder in Valparaiso, Ind., dropped into a police net Friday afternoon after an automobile chase through the streets and a siege which promised gun play and bloodshed.

At the end the three surrendered tamely enough, much to the disappointment of newspaper reporters and photographers, who hurriedly had buckled on their bullet proof vests and dashed to the scene of the siege upon first police flashes that Saltis and a dozen pals were standing off the first group of officers while reinforcements hurried to their assistance.

The battle which might have been had its inception when a detective squad rushing the southwest side sighted two "high priced and high powered" automobiles carrying Frank "Lefty" Koncil, recently acquitted with Saltis of the murder of John "Mitter" Foely, and other suspicious looking occupants.

The alleged gangsters stepped on accelerators when the detectives hailed them and, taking advantage of the speed of their machines, momentarily escaped and took refuge in a small frame store formerly used as a saloon.

The detectives deployed to prevent their quarry leaving by back or side doors, after collecting three pistols abandoned in the gangster automobiles and quickly word spread that southside gunmen and deectives were about to wage a fight to the death.

The only action came, however, when Koncil dashed from the beleagured grocery to a neighboring house where he was taken without the firing of a shot. His companions remained in the grocery and submitted to arrest, four detective squads meanwhile having appeared.

WAVE OF COLD PASSES, LEAVING 6 DEAD IN WAKE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Leaving a toll of six deaths and much damage in its wake, the cold wave which swept the mountain south and the southwest last night was rapidly passing from the territory, excepting Texas, with prospects of a generally fair day today and mounting temperatures.

Texas, however, where a sixty mile gale from the northwest brought heavy damage Friday, was due for the coldest weather of the winter last night.

Two more deaths were added to the toll of snow slides in the Rocky mountain region when a snowslide Friday carried away the tramway station of the sunnyside mine at Durango, Colo. Fear was held that others might have lost their lives. Four were killed Thursday and Wednesday in snowslides near Price, Utah.

Montana was wintry yesterday with zero and cloudy weather at Havre, and 30 above zero and snow at Helena. Wyoming was mild, the predicted cold wave having jumped over into Nebraska. The blizzard had subsided in Colorado.

Lane Sentenced To Five Years On Check Conviction

Five years imprisonment in the state penitentiary was the sentence meted out to Joe Lane this morning by District Judge Shepherd. Lane was convicted by a jury two weeks ago on a forgery charge.

Lane had been out of the penitentiary but a month at the time of his alleged crime. According to testimony in the case, he wrote out two spurious checks, one for $19 and one for $20, signing the name of a farmer near Lincoln. One of these checks he cashed himself at the First National bank, giving the other to a friend to cash.

MILITARY DRILL MERITS ARGUED

For three hours opponents and friends of compulsory military training at the University of Nebraska spiritedly debated this question before the education committee of the house of representatives and an audience of about 200 persons in the house chamber Friday night. At the end of this time Chairman Troy L. Davis called a halt to this open hearing on H. R. 500 although there were still a number of persons in the audience who wished to be heard.

The proponents of this measure were first given 45 minutes in which to present their argument. Representative Frank Wells of Jefferson county, who proposed this measure introduced Rev. Ervine Inglis, T. F. A. Williams, Mrs. Clara B. Clayton, Homer Kyle and J. F. Moredick as speakers for the measure which reads as follows:

"Military training in the University of Nebraska shall be optional with the students and not a compulsory requirement for graduation."

Objects To Philosophy.

Rev. Mr. Inglis declared that the objection was not to the drill feature but to the fact that under the conditions in which it is offered the students are compelled to submit to the philosophy that "war is necessary and unavoidable and cannot be prevented.' Over 29,000 voters have signed the petition circulated by the committee of 100 so that a referendum vote can be forced, he declared.

Mr. Williams, Lincoln attorney, read from the R. O. T. C. manual quotations which he said prove that the instructors have the military philosophy that "force is the ultimate power" inculcated in them and will impart this attitude ot students whether the manual is used or not.

In his rebuttal Mr. Williams represented himself as a "middle of the roader" not necessarily favoring passage of H. R. 500. He proposed instead that the legislature by resolution seek to have the university authorities work out some plan along conservative lines which would not work to the detriment of the school. He said he had reason to believe that the university authorities were willing to make some concession in regard to this question.

Mrs. Clayton, speaking for women who signed the petition, said that "until the people of all nations shall have learned to think peace there shall be no peace."

Homer Kyle, Lincoln attorney, talked on legal phases from the viewpoint of compulsory drill opponents, declaring that the Morrill land grant act makes a military training course required but not compulsory to all students. He objected to control which he claims the war department unrightfully exercises in the university through absolute control of the military department.

Mr. Moredick appeared as a representative forthe Big Four railroad brotherhoods of this state who adopted a resolution opposing compulsory drill. This stand is taken because this drill is "training for war," he stated.

Speak Against Bill.

Marcus Poteet, as a representative of the American Legion introduced the following speakers who opposed H. R. 500: C. C. Fraizer, state commander of the legion; Frank D. Eager of Lincoln; E. B. Chappell, Lincoln municipal court judge, and Mrs. C. E. McGlasson, Lincoln.

Mr. Poteet declared that the present agitation is not striving at "compulsory" military training but at all military training and said that he spoke on behalf of the boys who were "murdered" by the American people during the World war and of the children who may have to enter another war.

"We of the American Legion know that war is not glorious but we know that we must have an adequate national defense system," declared Commander Fraizer in his plea that nothing be done to hinder "our very modest defense system.'

Any weakening of the R. O. T. C. system at the university is an opening wedge for weakening of the entire national defense system he declared. He also presented the argument that academic subjects at the university, such as English and history, are compulsory just as much as is military training.

Mr. Eager declared the issue is a national one which has "its bed over in Russia." The movement is directed at the National Defense act and is not concerned with giving the university students any more freedom of choice in selecting courses as proponents often claim in Mr. Eager's opinion.

Judge Chappell declared that compulsion did not work to the disadvantage of working students and as proof cited the fact that he attended the university and secured a degree without taking military training because he had to work. The legislature has acted on drill by passing and approving the Morrill land grant act he believes.

Mrs. McGlasson told of the action taken by representatives of twenty-nine women's patriotic organizations representing two million women in favoring military training on the grounds that peace will come only through preparedness. The actual training is of great benefit to the student she believes.

Eight or ten other persons took part in the open debate which concluded the hearing.

AMERICA'S OIL SUPPLY AMPLE, OSBORN FEELS

CHICAGO, Feb. 19. —(AP)— The untested oil lands of this country are far too great and the improved methods of finding and producing oil are too promising to permit alarm over possible future shortage of crude oil, in the opinion of Campbell Osborn of Ponca City, Okla., economist for the Mariand Oil Co.

More efficient production and use of oil is the best means of conservation and is the next step to be taken, said an address by Mr. Osborn read before the midwest power conference here Friday by N. H. Sangor of Chicago. Mr. Osborn was unable to attend.

"Each year the prediction is made that the peak of production for petroleum has passed," he said, "and that the time is close when fuel oil will be so high it can no longer compete with coal. Last year it was said crude oil output would be far less than it was in 1925.

"I believe that the output in 1927, on the basis of present prices, will exceed 1926; that the peak production will ultimately be determined by peak demand and that is many years away."

Referring to the uses of fuel oil and gasoline, Mr. Osborn said a New York engineer estimated that fuel oil would compete equally with gasoline on a price basis, when a total yield of 42.5 per cent of gasoline by combined cracking, skimming and blending methods is reached. "And at this point," he declared, "the inefficient use of fuel oil will vanish."

EASTRIDGE CLUB SHOWS GROWTH DURING THE YEAR

Guy Hunt, R. S. Johnson and E. R. Heiny were elected to the board of directors of the Eastridge Country club at its annaul meeting at the club house Friday evening. The audit of the club's expenditures and income for the past year was read and approved, and a general review of the improvements and development during 1926 was given by directors.

The past year has proved a banner one in the life of the Eastridge club. Improvements include a large swimming pool, spacious dining and ball rooms, locker rooms for both ladies and men, showers, a modern kitchen, a grill room and other attractive features. Although not entirely paid for a large part of the construction cost was met with the completion of the building.

Plans for additional financing and other general plans for 1927 will be discussed by the board of directors when it meets early next week. Membership in the club, it was reported increased 122, swelling the total to around 430. President Howard Hadley presided over the meeting.

SALE OF CHURCH DECLARED VALID

Sale of the Refuge Baptist church to J. H. Bruce and its later transfer to Hattie Taylor were declared valid by District Judge Stewart Friday after a several days' hearing.

Judge Stewart said that trustees of the church evidently signed the deed and should have known what they were about. He criticized Rev. Mr. Bruce, however, for not finding a better way for the church to get out of its financial difficulties.

CONTROL OF THE AIR.

Congress Friday took the last step towards establishing federal control and regulation of the industry when the senate passed the bill rewritten by house and senate conferees, establishing a governmental commission, with authority to take such steps as appear necessary to eliminate the abuses which exist.

The bill which now goes to the president for signature represents the fruits of a compromise. It is not a model measure and it unquestionably is open to serious criticism on the basis that it establishes another governmental agency which was unnecessary and hence wasteful and extravagant. The machinery already existed to do what this new commission is expected to do. Secretary Herbert Hoover, of the Department of Commerce, was willing to assume supervision of the radio industry. It falls logically within his department. He had the organization already perfected, and the work could have been carried on with but small additional expense.

The fight over this radio legislation furnishes a very illuminating explanation as to why governmental costs are mounting. We keep adding to government. We insist upon new agencies and new commissions. Under the provisions of the radio bill, the commission which is established, is supposed to function for a year. What is to be done after that time appears a bit indefinite, but presumably control and regulation is expected to pass to the Department of Commerce. Judging from our experience with other commissions and agencies, we know better. Once created, a commission bends every effort toward perpetuating itself. Its very first aim will be to insure its permanence, and notwithstanding the very definitely established opposition to new governmental creations, we can now accept as a settled fact that radio regulation will come under a new and distinct governmental agency.

For that congress is to blame.

The public has a very vital interest in this effort to assume control of the air.

It is an interest superior to that of the manufacturers, or those who have any direct interest in the commercial development of the industry.

To protect the public in the enjoyment of the pleasures and conveniences of radio should be the first consideration of the new radio commission. It will of necessity have to guard against the charging of extortionate rates for radio transmission. It will attempt to prevent the establishment of monopolies; to control wave lengths, the number and power of stations, chain broadcasting and the length and hours of broadcasting.

The principal abuse which the public desires corrected relates to confusion and chaos which now exists. The more noteworthy and worthwhile programs are lost to thousands of radio enthusiasts because of interference. At present every broadcasting station may use the air whenever it desires. The result is that most of them are busy most of the time. Less frequent programs, more carefully prepared and consequently more pretentious, will prove of benefit to the broadcasters as well as appeasing the very just demands of the radio fans.

The commercial problems are more complicated. The average man or woman who tunes in on the radio is annoyed when the program is strictly commercial. They want entertainment and diversion. They do not want a sales talk. It will be the duty of the commission to impose certain restrictions on this phase of radio's development.

There are now more than 500 companies in America engaged in producing radios or radio equipment. Thousands of people are employed in the industry. Millions of sets have been sold. Radio's rise to popularity has been little short of marvelous. The agency which has been created to control it has a big job ahead because it is in such general use.

"RELIEF" IN REVERSE ENGLISH.

With all the agitation the country has heard about "farm relief," culminating in the passage of the McNary-Haugen bill by congress, it would seem that the prospect of receiving government aid promised by this measure should have had some effect by this time in sending prices upward. To be sure, the plan is not yet in operation, and a presidential veto may head it off entirely. However, if it possessed any real virtue the markets would certainly reflect some upward tendency on the chance of its being put into effect.

Instead of this, prices of wheat, corn, and hogs—the three basic commodities in which western agriculture is interested, were lower on February 18, the day after the bill passed the house and was sent to the president, than a month before. They were likewise below the quotations on these same products last October, and last July, and generally lower than February a year ago.

Why is this? Can it be that congress is a hoodoo to the farmer, and that whenever it insists on mixing into his business the result is damaging to agriculture?

Certainly it looks that way. A few years ago when the Fordney-McCumber tariff law was enacted, increasing tariff duties on agricultural products, prices at once took a header. The tariff-makers had promised the farmer better returns for his labor, but they failed to make good. And now, with the passage of the McNary-Haugen bill, the price movement is again downward instead of upward. What is the matter, anyway?

Any farmer who has been taken in by the talk about "relief" will find food for thought in the following comparison of cash prices paid for standard grades on the Chicago market, as shown by the daily published quotations for the dates indicated:

Date	Wheat	Corn	Hogs
Feb. 18, 1927	$1.42	$.77¼	$11.75 to $12.10
Jan. 18, 1927	1.44¼	.81	12.00 to 12.25
Oct. 18, 1926	1.44½	.78	13.25 to 13.80
July 17, 1926	1.48¾	.81½	13.40 to 14.10
Feb. 18, 1926	1.72¾	.72	11.75 to 12.80

In the foregoing tabulation, there is just one instance where an agricultural commodity brought as much following the passage of the McNary-Haugen bill as before. This is 5¾ cents more for corn than was being paid one year ago. At that, however, the present price is 3¾ cents less than a month ago, ¾ cent under the October quotation, and 4 cents below last July.

It is up to the political "relievers" to explain this peculiar phenomenon and tell the farmers why prices are going backward instead of forward, in the face of all the rosy promises they have been making.

THE "USELESS" CHURCH.

He analyzes the church situation in America.

There are at present 200,000 churches in the United States, he points out, representing 200 different denominations and faiths. They have called for an investment of $3,000,000,000 and cost $300,000,000 annually to maintain. They pay no taxes to the community. They pay their ministers an average wage of only $800 a year. They spend less than 50 cents per year per child on religious education. The majority of them open their doors only three times a week for religious services.

Most of them were erected by people now dead, and many of them are maintained by funds bequeathed by those who are dead. Most of them were erected when the village, not the town or city, was the unit of national life. Many of them, Mr. Collins declares, were intended to meet the social needs of an isolated rural community which no longer prevails. Many of them were built before the invention of the telegraph, telephone, camera, bicycle and trolley car. Almost all of them were built before the movie, the radio and the cheap car.

These facts lead Mr. Collins to believe 100,000 of these outlying churches could be abandoned as "useless." He concludes by observing that fully half of these early built churches are not suited for modern service.

Very few communities, it is safe to assume, are prepared to accept Mr. Collins' proposed Sentimental considerations alone will mean that we shall go ahead maintaining these agencies, which he says are unfitted to serve.

THE WRONG MAN.

Things went very well for a while. The holdup was getting considerable cash in various places around the store where Clark worked. Then he turned his back and Clark slipped into the back room, getting a gun. He then stepped out and ordered the bandit to throw up his hands. Plain and fancy shooting ensued, each man hiding behind a show case. Clark was shot through the shoulder. Finally, both guns empty, the holdup man dashed for the door. But Clark intercepted him, in spite of his wound, and held him until the police arrived.

One may say that Clark was foolish to take such chances merely to save a little money. That is true. But still one cannot but admire a man who thinks so little of danger and who has such cool nerve.

Diet and Health

TOBACCO AND GASTRO-INTESTINAL DISTURBANCES.

The International Medical Digest has a resume of an article printed in an Italian medical magazine, and as this article agrees with our findings, I'll give you the gist of it. You'll see that smoking or the use of tobacco in any way may not be so innocent.

The damages caused by nicotine extend especially over the whole digestive tube because nicotine injures the sympathtic ganglia (the collection of nerve cells back of the stomach, usually known as the solar plexus) which have largely to do with the digestive organs.

Chronic inflammation of the mouth and tongue are frequent. But the mucous membrane lining of the stomach is more frequently injured. This, at first, causes an excess secretion of the hydrochloric acid with its very disagreeable symptoms and later there may be a total loss of the normal acidity, with its still more disagreeable effects. There may be pains in the stomach which will resemble the pains of gastric or duodenal ulcer; in fact, chronic nicotine poisoning may even cause ulcers. The peristalsis suffers so there may be constipation, alternating with diarrhea. One of the author's cases, believing that he had an incurable inflammation of the intestinal tract, increased his daily number of cigars in order to forget his troubles but these naturally increased. On the advice of his doctor he cut smoking out entirely and his symptoms were relieved.

It is quite evident that some people have a more than usual intolerance to the poison of nicotine, and it surely gets 'em good. Draggy legs, trembling, gas, palpitation, headaches, dizziness and all sorts of things that can be traced to its effect.

Are you a smoker? Is there anything the matter with you? Try cutting out smoking. Swabbing out the mouth with one-half of one percent solution of silver nitrate, once or twice a day, "will make smoking or chewing taste so rotten," as one doctor expressed it to me, "that you will hate it."

Recently I had a letter from one of the followers, who confirmed this statement. He persisted in the swabbing and cured himself of smoking. Smoking, unless you inhale, is largely a muscle habit, and just as a baby gets used to a pacifier and wants to suck on it all the time, the smoker gets used to playing and puffing the smoke. Therefore the use of tobacco substitutes as a cure, is not a good plan.

Canned Vegetables.

The vitamins in vegetables are not materially affected by the modern process of canning. In fact, it has been demonstrated that prolonged home-cooking in open pot, so that the oxygen of the air has free access, destroys more of the vitamins than are destroyed by canning. Therefore, when you cannot get fresh vegtables, do not hesitate to use the canned, for we need vegetables not only for the vitamins but for the mineral elements and roughage and these also are not injured by the canning.

Canned tomatoes are almost as potent in vitamins as the fresh, uncooked ones, for it has been found that the acid of tomatoes seems to preserve the vitamins. This acid (as of most fruits) is fully oxydized in the body, leaving an alkaline reaction which is desirable.

In the winter, one can always obtain fresh cabbage, however, and that should be used very frequently, uncooked.

A Thrilling Mystery Story.

The Last Night Out.

When the stewardess announced that Miss Deane's bath was ready the next morning the girl awoke from a healthy, dreamless slumber, although she had lain wide-eyed until long after eight bells on the previous night. And now, as she returned from her salt water plunge and sipped her early tea, she felt inclined to look upon the proceedings of the afternoon and evening as mere imaginative nonsense.

Mr. Marriott had been merely curious about a young girl traveling alone and courteously anxious to be of service. Mrs. Carlin was eccentric and sensational, as her choice of literature proved, but surely that book had not been marked! That "message" was only a coincidence and all but one phrase of it quite incomprehensible. As to her neighbor's warning against the young Canadian, and suggestion of "danger"—well, that must have been nonsense too! Perhaps the poor woman in the next stateroom was more than eccentric, perhaps she was a little deranged.

Yet the notion of mistaken identity rankled and after breakfast—at which Mr. Mariott did not appear—Miss Deane took her accustomed place on deck with a sense of impending adventure which was pleasurably thrilling to her blissful inexperience.

After all, it was the last day out. To-morrow they would sail up the bay and in a few hours thereafter she would be in Daddy's arms! Nothing else mattered except that if—if Mr. Mariott did think there was anything queer and dreadful about her, she would like to have him know the truth sometime. Of course they wouldn't ever meet again, but still . . .

"Did you sleep well, my dear?" It was Mrs. Carlin, holloweyed beneath her complexion veil, who had paused at the foot of the steamer chair. "I was afraid you might sit up too late—reading."

There was an appreciable pause before the last word, but Julia Deane smiled as she shook her head.

"Your book, you mean, Mrs. Carlin? I threw it away as you told me, when I'd had enough of it. I'm sorry, I didn't find it interesting."

She could feel the other woman's gaze in tense speculation, and after a pause Mrs. Carlin observed:

"Really, I'm disappointed. I had thought that at least one or two of the phrases would hold your attention."

So it had been purposely marked for her, after all! Julia Deane smiled again! She would find out what all this meant!

"Oh, they did, of course, but only for a moment. I was asleep long before—midnight." She paused as the other had done and then added: "Perhaps you would care for some of my books of poetry? They are printed without italics, but the sentiment is rather pretty."

For an instant she quailed inwardly, as the faint purplish patches on Mrs. Carlin's cheeks seemed to stand out unnaturally against the powdery whiteness under the veil. Then the older woman laughed lightly, pleasantly, yet with an undertone that was almost threatening.

"I have passed the age of poetry my dear, thanks just the same! There isn't much time left for reading since we dock tomorrow. You are looking quite yourself again—my congratulations!"

She nodded brightly and moved off with a graceful, still youthfully buoyant sway of her slender figure and again the girl's eyes followed her. Friendly warning or threat, that message had been meant for her, or the person she was suspected of being, and her challenge had been accepted. But what did it all mean?

Other passengers passed on their matutinal promenade, among them a blond, rather distinguished-looking man of middle age who glanced at her quizzically, but with a wholly impersonal regard, and Julia Deane vouchsafed him no second thought. Where was Mr. Mariott? Philip Mariott, the passenger list announced him. It was a nice name. It fitted him, somehow. What if she should accept his offer of services tomorrow. She hadn't the least notion of the bother of getting through the customhouse even with nothing dutiable to declare, and if it did entail giving him her real name—? Well, she didn't know herself quite how big a man Daddy was in America, but it would be comforting to have this inquisitive young man know she wasn't just anybody!

Daddy! Only twice had he come to her, loaded with extravagant toys and marvelous sweets, in the twelve years she had spent with the sisters. She didn't remember much before that, a tiny mite of seven wouldn't, naturally. There'd been a rambling old house, as large and stately in memory as the chateaux of France, but in grounds less artificially perfect; a nurse called "Ruth" and heaps of other servants as well as many guests who came and went so quietly that she only caught occasional, shadowy glimpses of them, except for Daddy's attorney, an old gentleman with a shock of silvery hair, whose name was Mr. Horace Gray. She remembered that only because of little notes he had written to her enclosed with checks for the sisters when Daddy had been away off somewhere on a long trip. There'd never been any other children to play with, and no lingering recollection remained of the mother whom the sisters had told her was with God, but now she and Daddy would relive it all again . . .

There was the young Canadian at last! No one else on board walked with that peculiar, free stride that wasn't just a swagger, nor held himself with quite that air of wholly unconscious superiority. Was he coming straight to her?

Miss Deane glanced up, unaware of the sudden brightening of her blue eyes or the quick flush in her cheeks, but a moment later she was conscious of an odd sensation of blankness, for he had passed with a bow that wasn't exactly pleasant, although she could not have told why. What had changed him from the delightful if almost impertinently curious acquaintance of yesterday?

He rounded the promenade and went by again, this time without a glance in her direction, and when he had disappeared on the port deck she rose and went into the main saloon to seat herself at a small desk. The Mother Superior must know that she was safe on the last lap of her homeward journey, and that she was sorry for the anxiety she must have caused. Also there were messages to send to the girls who had been her inseparable friends in that time which seemed so long ago even now, and although it wasn't an easy letter to write she bent to her task assiduously.

Deep in the second page, Miss Deane was only subconsciously aware that another passenger had taken the opposite place, separated by the low rack of stationery, until she looked up and met the blue-gray eyes of Philip Mariott.

"Shall I disturb you?" he asked.

She shook her head, but slid the blotter over the upper part of the page.

"I was just finishing."

In evidence, she added a rushing farewell and signed "Julia Deane" with very black, heavy strokes of her pen, then addressed an envelope to a fictitious girl on a randomly chosen street in Paris. When she had sealed it the young man bent forward and spoke again in a low, hurried tone.

"May I speak to you for a moment, Miss Deane?" He stressed the name. "Will you come over to the settee beside the bookcase? We shall be quite private there and this is urgent!"

There was something almost as unpleasant in his tone as there had been in his earlier greeting, and it was authoritative, actually commanding! For an instant the girl was tempted to refuse, but curiosity got the better of her pique and, nodding coolly, she rose, strolling over to the seat indicated. As he followed she observed:

"I really don't understand in the least! You were almost rude yesterday, Mr. Mariott, and now—? What can you possibly have to say to me in private?"

"Yesterday I was curious about you! today I know." He spoke very brusquely. "We anticipated your return to America about this time and our people very cleverly picked you up within a mile of the convent."

"Do you mean Mr. and Mrs. Graham, from America?" Miss Deane exclaimed in an incredulous but guarded tone. "Who are your people. Monsieur-who-travels-for-a-London-firm?"

"Your story of running away was clever, too." He ignored her question. "Naturally, the sisters will neither deny nor affirm it. Sick work for a little convent girl, but the blood is in you!"

He was jeering at her, actually treating her with contempt! The first person in all her life who dared to speak to her so! Her face went very white.

"Are you trying to pretend that you know who I am? I mean, that I'm not Julia Deane?"

"Still bluffing?" he sneered, but his eyes held a look of disillusionment that was almost pain. "I've been perfectly aware all along that you were Janet Dane; I wonder a more clever alias wasn't provided for you! I wasn't sure of the whole truth until yesterday, but I warn you now you can't get away with it. Your game's up and you're in danger; better drop it before it's too late and turn what you're carrying over to me! I can at least protect you."

"Protect me?" There was loathing in her voice and she shrank from him as though he were some noisome thing. "You insult me! I am Janet Dane, and I am going to my father! Do you know who he is, and what he will do to you for this? Let me pass!"

She swept by him and out in the companionway, but once beyond his hateful view she fairly fled to her stateroom and, locking her door, she sank down on the berth, her face buried in her hands. It was not mistaken identity, after all! Both these horrible people thought she had something tremendously valuable in her possession and were trying to get it from her! But what could it be; how did they think she came by it, and what dreadful sort of creatures were they?

She scarcely touched the luncheon and dinner which were brought to her but paced the narrow cabin in a fever of resentment and fear. If only she were on land, with Daddy! Would to-morrow never come?

At ten a discreet knock came on her door and she easked, cautiously, who was there.

"A steward, miss," came the respectful answer. "I have something for you from the doctor."

Janet Dane opened the door. A steward indeed stood there alone, proffering a jug and glass on a tray.

"Hot lemon squash, miss," he exclaimed. "The doctor missed you at lunch and dinner, and thought if you were not feeling quite all right this might help you to sleep, miss."

Janet took it, thanked him and relocked her door. She didn't know ship's doctors were so thoughtful when their services were not called in, but the concotion sounded delightful and worry had given her a burning thirst.

At the first sip, however, she eyed the glass askance. It had an odd taste, not quite like any hot lemonade she had taken before. Could it be——? But she mustn't let her nerves get the best of her! Of course the doctor had sent it! Still, she didn't really need it.

Janet hesitated a moment longer, then poured it impulsively down the handbasin, and prepared for bed. If she could sleep a little it would bring the day that much nearer and then she would be free from those odious people forever!

How long she did sleep Janet never knew, but she awakened to find a tiny, sharp gleam of light darting around the stateroom and to hear the rustle of garments and the tinkle of toilet articles being thrown about.

A thief! Instinctively her hand sought the button in the woodwork beside her and, in the sudden glare of light which flooded the room, a crouching woman rose and whirled about. Janet faced Mrs. Carlin's furious, desperate eyes and the glitter of a revolver pointed at her breast!

"Of course not. I always said you'd ditch that jane somehow, although it did look, there in the last year, as though she had you surrounded and your retreat cut off. I told the boys to watch you make your getaway as soon as commencement was over. But how did you manage it, anyhow?"

Ourselves and Our Children

By Helen Harrington Hartt

Even Mrs. Waker Fails.

Helen Harrington Hartt

Mrs. Waker had been out on a shopping expedition, and in an old second hand shop had found two genuine Sixteenth Century blue and white Delft jugs. Treasures!

Of course, when she brought them home there was a great deal of excitement over them, for there was the Delft mark on the bottom of the jugs, and there was the date, 1515.

Contrary to her usual custom, Mrs. Waker, instead of putting the jugs in any reasonable place and asking the children not to touch them, put them on the highest shelf she could find, and then left the room.

She returned unexpectedly and found Robert on a chair, trying to reach the jugs.

Mrs. Waker was a little bit cross, because she had been shopping all day, and whenever she got over tired, she always found it difficult to manage the children.

A little later she came into the room again, and on looking at the jugs, found that one of them had been misplaced and was standing perilously close to the edge of the shelf. Not only that, but Robert was just climbing down from the chair.

Then Mrs. Waker did something that she seldom did, and which she would have told any other mother not to do. She slapped Robert's hands good and hard.

"Now, when I tell you to let things alone, you let them alone," she said with a good deal of spirit.

A blazing look of resentment shot into Robert's eyes. There was no repentance, and when his mother left the room there had been no reconciliation. When she returned, she found him again standing before the shelf, and the other jug had been misplaced.

"Robert, did you touch those jugs?" asked Mrs. Waker, trying hard to restrain her anger.

"Yes," said Robert sullenly; and then, more reasonably, "something got into me, and I was bound I'd touch them."

By this time Mrs. Waker had control of herself and realized that she had not been handling the situation in the right way.

"Robert, dear," she said, putting her arm around her boy—"You must forgive mother for the way she spoke to you. You see I came home very tired—and I was quite, quite unreasonable. I might have known you wouldn't touch the jugs if I asked you not to, but instead, I put them where they were a temptation."

Robert's arms went around his mother's neck and he in turn begged forgiveness for having been so stubborn. And then, they said no more about it.

DISCUSS CITY CHARTER PLAN

Proposals for Amendment Debated at East Lincoln League Meeting.

The proposed change in the city charter was discussed at a meeting of the East Lincoln Civic league at the Twenty-sixth and O streets school Friday evening. The general discussion was a culmination of a series of meetings in which city officials have been brought before the league by present and former city officials.

Supporting the proposed charter Don L. Love told of the benefits which would accrue if it were adopted. He claims that it would be more representative as it would provide for the election of fifteen men from all parts of the city. Thus legislation passed would be passed only after careful consideration and executive matters would be under the direct control of a mayor.

E. E. Duncan, city commissioner and candidate for mayor, defended the present plan. The rejection of tax proposals at the last two city elections is no reflection upon the council, he said. He feels that if the need of additional taxes is presented in the right way to the people they will respond for the welfare of the city. If a mayor is installed who will carefully watch over all the departments and act as a general executive, the present charter need not be amended, the commissioner said.

Speaking for organized labor, Joe Gilbert and Fred Eisler opposed the proposed change. They favor a charter which permits men to be elected from the rank and file of the people. They do not want a representative from each ward or from set off districts of the city. This, they pointed out, would prevent the election of two very capable men from one part of the city to the council.

The talks were all followed by discussions and questions. The league seemed to be divided almost evenly for and against the change.

Representative George W. O'Malley spoke on legislative matters.

McMullen Praises Code System To Missouri Solons

Governor McMullen received an inquiry Saturday morning from the Missouri legislature regarding the organization and success of the code system.

A bill has been introduced in the Missouri legislature providing for the adoption of such a system. It is intended to consolidate some eighty-five departments and commissions in the system. When the Nebraska code system was instituted about 25 commissions and departments were consolidated.

The answer of Governor McMullen was full of praise for the system and he suggested that the Missouri legislature give the bill its earnest consideration. An invitation was extended by him to the Missouri legislature to send an investigating committee to Lincoln to make a study of the Nebraska system.

EDITORS CLOSE MEETING HERE

H. D. Leggett Installed as President at Final Session.

H. D. Leggett of Ord was installed as president of the Nebraska Press association for the coming year at the final session of its three day convention Saturday morning at the Lindell hotel. W. A. Brown of Friend, president during the past year, presented the president's gavel to Mr. Leggett.

A past president's button, a token of appreciation from the association to a past presiding officer, was presented Mr. Brown by Frank Edgecombe of Geneva. Mr. Edgecombe said that Mr. Brown was to be congratulated on the splendid growth the organization had during his term of office.

The importance of the editorial page in any paper and especially in a community paper was brought out in a talk by Dwight Griswold of Gordon. Mr. Griswold explained many ways in which an editorial can be used to forward the interests of the paper and its community.

Accounting in the small office was taken up by Dale Krebs of Scotia, one of the youngest editors in the state. He stated that to be successful a paper must have as good business methods as any other enterprise. He said that it has been just recently that the small town publisher became aware of this fact. Frank Edgecombe and Clayton Snow also spoke on the subject.

W. J. Reynolds of Harvard discussed service to advertisers, stating that the newspaper publisher should work in cooperation with his advertisers in the matter of layout. He explained some of the methods used by his paper in Harvard.

The farmer and the local paper was the topic of J. H. Falloon of Falls City. He stated that all prosperity depends upon the prosperity of the farmer and advised a system of education through the newspaper for better equipment and new methods.

Several matters up before the legislature and congress were discussed by members of the association. All of the topics of the morning meeting were open to discussion from the floor and much comment was had on several important items. The convention officially closed at noon, although members of the official board were to meet with the secretary during the afternoon.

Will Rogers Sees Possibility of "Al" Smith as Kleagle

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 19.—Will Rogers, speaking before the last session of the Alabama legislature last night, urged the southern democrats to let the next national election go by default and urged Alabamans to confine Senator Heflin to telling negro stories in the future.

Al Smith is such a likeable fellow, he told legislators, that after two weeks in Montgomery the local klan would elect him kleagle.

Prohibition is not an issue in the south, he said; it's a commodity. "We're not going to let any Yankee send us back to light wine and beer after drinking corn likker for eight years."

STANDARD LOAF BILL ADVANCED BY SMALL VOTE

Trenmor Cone's standard loaf bread bill, H. R. 200, is not yet out of the woods, though it ran the committee of the whole gauntlet Saturday forenoon and was boosted to the third reading calendar in the state representative diet. With seventy members present, the response of "nays" was almost as loud as that of the "ayes" on sending it ahead. Its fate on final passage will depend on the thirty absentees when they return.

In his speech urging the house to place its approval on the standard loaf bill, Mr. Cone declared he was simply trying to give the consumer a square deal by insuring him an honest weight loaf. The baker, he said, buys all the ingredients according to standard weights and measures fixed by law, and therefore should sell his product on the same basis.

Amendments were added cutting out a cumulattively penalty for second violation, leaving $10 to $100 fine or jail imprisonment not over 30 days to govern each offense, and extending the tolerance of 3 1-2 ounces per pound for variation in weight or loaves to cover a period of 12 hours after delivery to the retailer.

Mr. Porter moved for indefinite postponement, fearing that the bill might prevent housewives baking bread at home and selling it to grocers. It was defeated by a close vote.

P. T. A. PROGRAM GIVEN FRIDAY AT RANDOLPH SCHOOL

About 500 persons attended the program given at the Randolph school Friday evening by the dramatic department of the Randolph Parent-Teacher association.

The entertainment was opened with two cello solos by Miss Cornelia Rankin accompanied by Miss Mary Rankin. Miss Rankin played "Gavotte" by Popper and "To a Wild Rose" by McDowell.

A one-act comedy entitled "A Pair of Lunatics" was next presented with Miss Evelyn Whiffen and Russel Lindskog as the main characters. A mind reading act was then given as a surprise number on the program. F. D. Dehm, dressed in Chinese costume, acted as the mind reader and J. Pugsley was the interpreter.

A clown dance by Loule Tyhurst accompanied by Charlotte Ray was followed by the main feature of the program, the Randolph Minstrels. Mrs. Everett Kingery acted as interlocutress and Mrs. P. E. Thompson as pianist and in the chorus were the mesdames Noble, Hoover, Sinclair, House, Cummins, Clemens, Mohrman, Clark, Forney, Pothast, Atkins Hill, Westberg and Meek.

Machine Missing—The theft of a gum vending machine from the counter at the Baltimore Billiard Parlor, 1540 O street, was reported to police early Friday evening by W. L. Bell, the owner.

CONTROL OF THE AIR.

Congress Friday took the last step towards establishing federal control and regulation of the industry when the senate passed the bill rewritten by house and senate conferees, establishing a governmental commission, with authority to take such steps as appear necessary to eliminate the abuses which exist.

The bill which now goes to the president for signature represents the fruits of a compromise. It is not a model measure and it unquestionably is open to serious criticism on the basis that it establishes another governmental agency which was unnecessary and hence wasteful and extravagant. The machinery already existed to do what this new commission is expected to do. Secretary Herbert Hoover, of the Department of Commerce, was willing to assume supervision of the radio industry. It falls logically within his department. He had the organization already perfected, and the work could have been carried on with but small additional expense.

The fight over this radio legislation furnishes a very illuminating explanation as to why governmental costs are mounting. We keep adding to government. We insist upon new agencies and new commissions. Under the provisions of the radio bill, the commission which is established, is supposed to function for a year. What is to be done after that time appears a bit indefinite, but presumably control and regulation is expected to pass to the Department of Commerce. Judging from our experience with other commissions and agencies, we know better. Once created, a commission bends every effort toward perpetuating itself. Its very first aim will be to insure its permanence, and notwithstanding the very definitely established opposition to new governmental creations, we can now accept as a settled fact that radio regulation will come under a new and distinct governmental agency.

For that congress is to blame.

The public has a very vital interest in this effort to assume control of the air.

It is an interest superior to that of the manufacturers, or those who have any direct interest in the commercial development of the industry.

To protect the public in the enjoyment of the pleasures and conveniences of radio should be the first consideration of the new radio commission. It will of necessity have to guard against the charging of extortionate rates for radio transmission. It will attempt to prevent the establishment of monopolies; to control wave lengths, the number and power of stations, chain broadcasting and the length and hours of broadcasting.

The principal abuse which the public desires corrected relates to confusion and chaos which now exists. The more noteworthy and worthwhile programs are lost to thousands of radio enthusiasts because of interference. At present every broadcasting station may use the air whenever it desires. The result is that most of them are busy most of the time. Less frequent programs, more carefully prepared and consequently more pretentious, will prove of benefit to the broadcasters as well as appeasing the very just demands of the radio fans.

The commercial problems are more complicated. The average man or woman who tunes in on the radio is annoyed when the program is strictly commercial. They want entertainment and diversion. They do not want a sales talk. It will be the duty of the commission to impose certain restrictions on this phase of radio's development.

There are now more than 500 companies in America engaged in producing radios or radio equipment. Thousands of people are employed in the industry. Millions of sets have been sold. Radio's rise to popularity has been little short of marvelous. The agency which has been created to control it has a big job ahead because it is in such general use.

"RELIEF" IN REVERSE ENGLISH.

With all the agitation the country has heard about "farm relief," culminating in the passage of the McNary-Haugen bill by congress, it would seem that the prospect of receiving government aid promised by this measure should have had some effect by this time in sending prices upward. To be sure, the plan is not yet in operation, and a presidential veto may head it off entirely. However, if it possessed any real virtue the markets would certainly reflect some upward tendency on the chance of its being put into effect.

Insted of this, prices of wheat, corn, and hogs—the three basic commodities in which western agriculture is interested, were lower on February 18, the day after the bill passed the house and was sent to the president, than a month before. They were likewise below the quotations on these same products last October, and last July, and generally lower than February a year ago.

Why is this? Can it be that congress is a hoodoo to the farmer, and that whenever it insists on mixing into his business the result is damaging to agriculture?

Certainly it looks that way. A few years ago when the Fordney-McCumber tariff law was enacted, increasing tariff duties on agricultural products, prices at once took a header. The tariff-makers had promised the farmer better returns for his labor, but they failed to make good. And now, with the passage of the McNary-Haugen bill, the price movement is again downward instead of upward. What is the matter, anyway?

Any farmer who has been taken in by the talk about "relief" will find food for thought in the following comparison of cash prices paid for standard grades on the Chicago market, as shown by the daily published quotations for the dates indicated:

Date	Wheat	Corn	Hogs
Feb. 18, 1927	$1.42	$.77¼	$11.75 to $12.10
Jan. 18, 1927	1.44¼	.81	12.00 to 12.25
Oct. 18, 1926	1.44½	.78	13.25 to 13.80
July 17, 1926	1.48¾	.81¼	13.40 to 14.10
Feb. 18, 1926	1.72¾	.72	11.75 to 12.80

In the foregoing tabulation, there is just one instance where an agricultural commodity brought as much following the passage of the McNary-Haugen bill as before. This is 5¼ cents more for corn than was being paid one year ago. At that, however, the present price is 3¾ cents less than a month ago, ¾ cent under the October quotation, and 4 cents below last July.

It is up to the political "relievers" to explain this peculiar phenomenon and tell the farmers why prices are going backward instead of forward, in the face of all the rosy promises they have been making.

THE "USELESS" CHURCH.

He analyzes the church situation in America.

There are at present 200,000 churches in the United States, he points out, representing 200 different denominations and faiths. They have called for an investment of $3,000,000,000 and cost $300,000,000 annually to maintain. They pay no taxes to the community. They pay their ministers an average wage of only $800 a year. They spend less than 50 cents per year per child on religious education. The majority of them open their doors only three times a week for religious services.

Most of them were erected by people now dead, and many of them are maintained by funds bequeathed by those who are dead. Most of them were erected when the village, not the town or city, was the unit of national life. Many of them, Mr. Collins declares, were intended to meet the social needs of an isolated rural community which no longer prevails. Many of them were built before the invention of the telegraph, telephone, camera, bicycle and trolley car. Almost all of them were built before the movie, the radio and the cheap car.

These facts lead Mr. Collins to believe 100,000 of these outlying churches could be abandoned as "useless." He concludes by observing that fully half of these early built churches are not suited for modern service.

Very few communities, it is safe to assume, are prepared to accept Mr. Collins' proposed. Sentimental considerations alone will mean that we shall go ahead maintaining these agencies, which he says are unfitted to serve.

THE WRONG MAN.

Things went very well for a while. The holdup was getting considerable cash in various places around the store where Clark worked. Then he turned his back and Clark slipped into the back room, getting a gun. He then stepped out and ordered the bandit to throw up his hands. Plain and fancy shooting ensued, each man hiding behind a show case. Clark was shot through the shoulder. Finally, both guns empty, the holdup man dashed for the door. But Clark intercepted him, in spite of his wound, and held him until the police arrived.

One may say that Clark was foolish to take such chances merely to save a little money. That is true. But still one cannot but admire a man who thinks so little of danger and who has such cool nerve.

Diet and Health

By Lulu Hunt Peters, M. D.

TOBACCO AND GASTRO-INTESTINAL DISTURBANCES.

The International Medical Digest has a resume of an article printed in an Italian medical magazine, and as this article agrees with our findings, I'll give you the gist of it. You'll see that smoking or the use of tobacco in any way may not be so innocent.

The damages caused by nicotine extend especially over the whole digestive tube because nicotine injures the sympatntic ganglia (the collection of nerve cells back of the stomach, usually known as the solar plexus) which have largely to do with the digestive organs.

Chronic inflammation of the mouth and tongue are frequent. But the mucous membrane lining of the stomach is more frequently injured. This, at first, causes an excess secretion of the hydrochloric acid with its very disagreeable symptoms, and later there may be a total loss of the normal acidity, with its still more disagreeable effects. There may be pains in the stomach which will resemble the pains of gastric or duodenal ulcer; in fact, chronic nicotine poisoning may even cause ulcers. The peristalsis suffers so there may be constipation, alternating with diarrhea. One of the author's cases, believing that he had an incurable inflammation of the intestinal tract, increased his daily number of cigars in order to forget his troubles but these naturally increased. On the advice of his doctor he cut smoking out entirely and his symptoms were relieved.

It is quite evident that some people have a more than usual intolerance to the poison of nicotine, and it surely gets 'em good. Draggy legs, trembling, gas, palpitation, headaches, dizziness and all sorts of things that can be traced to its effect.

Are you a smoker? Is there anything the matter with you? Try cutting out smoking. Swabbing out the mouth with one-half of one percent solution of silver nitrate, once or twice a day, "will make smoking or chewing taste so rotten," as one doctor expressed it to me, "that you will hate it."

Recently I had a letter from one of the followers, who confirmed this statement. He persisted in the swabbing and cured himself of smoking. Smoking, unless you inhale, is largely a muscle habit, and just as a baby gets used to a pacifier and wants to suck on it all the time, the smoker gets used to playing and puffing the smoke. Therefore the use of tobacco substitutes as a cure, is not a good plan.

Canned Vegetables.

The vitamins in vegetables are not materially affected by the modern process of canning. In fact, it has been demonstrated that prolonged home cooking in on open pot, so that the oxygen of the air has free access, destroys more of the vitamins than are destroyed by canning. Therefore, when you cannot get fresh vegtables, do not hesitate to use the canned, for we need vegetables not only for the vitamins but for the mineral elements and roughage and these also are not injured by the canning.

Canned tomatoes are almost as potent in vitamins as the fresh, uncooked ones, for it has been found that the acid of tomatoes seems to preserve the vitamins. This acid (as of most fruits) is fully oxydized in the body, leaving an alkaline reaction which is desirable.

In the winter, one can always obtain fresh cabbage, however, and that should be used very frequently, uncooked.

A Thrilling Mystery Story.

The Last Night Out.

When the stewardess announced that Miss Deane's bath was ready the next morning the girl awoke from a healthy, dreamless slumber, although she had lain wide-eyed until long after eight bells on the previous night. And now, as she returned from her salt water plunge and sipped her early tea, she felt inclined to look upon the proceedings of the afternoon and evening as mere imaginative nonsense.

Mr. Marriott had been merely curious about a young girl traveling alone and courteously anxious to be of service. Mrs. Carlin was eccentric and sensational, as her choice of literature proved, but surely that book had not been marked! That "message" was only a coincidence and all but one phrase of it quite incomprehensible. As to her neighbor's warning against the young Canadian, and suggestion of "danger"—well, that must have been nonsense too! Perhaps the poor woman in the next stateroom was more than eccentric, perhaps she was a little deranged.

Yet the notion of mistaken identity rankled and after breakfast—at which Mr. Mariott did not appear—Miss Deane took her accustomed place on deck with a sense of impending adventure which was pleasurably thrilling to her blissful inexperience.

After all, it was the last day out! To-morrow they would sail up the bay and in a few hours thereafter she would be in Daddy's arms! Nothing else mattered except that if—if Mr. Mariott did think there was anything queer and dreadful about her, she would like to have him know the truth sometime. Of course they wouldn't ever meet again, but still . . .

"Did you sleep well, my dear?" It was Mrs. Carlin, holloweyed beneath her complexion veil, who had paused at the foot of the steamer chair. "I was afraid you might sit up too late—reading."

There was an appreciable pause before the last word, but Julia Deane smiled as she shook her head.

"Your book, you mean, Mrs. Carlin? I threw it away as you told me, when I'd had enough of it. I'm sorry, I didn't find it interesting."

She could feel the other woman's gaze in tense speculation, and after a pause Mrs. Carlin observed:

"Really, I'm disappointed. I had thought that at least one or two of the phrases would hold your attention."

So it had been purposely marked for her, after all! Julia Deane smiled again. She would find out what all this meant!

"Oh, they did, of course, but only for a moment. I was asleep long before—midnight." She paused as the other had done and then added: "Perhaps you would care for some of my books of poetry? They are printed without italics, but the sentiment is rather pretty."

For an instant she quailed inwardly, as the faint purplish patches on Mrs. Carlin's cheeks seemed to stand out unnaturally against the powdery whiteness under the veil. Then the older woman laughed lightly, pleasantly, yet with an undertone that was almost threatening.

"I have passed the age of poetry my dear, thanks just the same! There isn't much time left for reading since we dock tomorrow. You are looking quite yourself again—my congratulations!"

She nodded brightly and moved off with a graceful, still youthfully buoyant sway of her slender figure and again the girl's eyes followed her. Friendly warning or threat, that message had been meant for her, or the person she was suspected of being, and her challenge had been accepted. But what did it all mean?

Other passengers passed on their matutinal promenade, among them a blond, rather distinguished-looking man of middle age who glanced at her quizzically, but with a wholly impersonal regard, and Julia Deane vouchsafed him no second thought. Where was Mr. Mariott? Philip Mariott, the passenger list announced him. It was a nice name. It fitted him, somehow. What if she should accept his offer of services tomorrow. She hadn't the least notion of the bother of getting through the customhouse even with nothing dutiable to declare, and if it did entail giving him her real name—? Well, she didn't know herself quite how big a man Daddy was in America, but it would be comforting to have this inquisitive young man know she wasn't just anybody!

Daddy! Only twice had he come to her, loaded with extravagant toys and marvelous sweets, in the twelve years she had spent with the sisters. She didn't remember much before that, a tiny mite of seven wouldn't, naturally. There'd been a rambling old house, as large and stately in memory as the chateaux of France, but in grounds less artificially perfect; a nurse called "Ruth" and heaps of other servants as well as many guests who came and went so quietly that she only caught occasional, shadowy glimpses of them, except for Daddy's attorney, an old gentleman with a shock of silvery hair, whose name was Mr. Horace Gray. She remembered that only because of little notes he had written to her enclosed with checks for the sisters when Daddy had been away off somewhere on a long trip. There'd never been any other children to play with, and no lingering recollection remained of the mother whom the sisters had told her was with God, but now she and Daddy would relive it all again . . .

There was the young Canadian at last! No one else on board walked with that peculiar, free stride that wasn't just a swagger, nor held himself with quite that air of wholly unconscious superiority. Was he coming straight to her?

Miss Deane glanced up, unaware of the sudden brightening of her blue eyes or the quick flush in her cheeks, but a moment later she was conscious of an odd sensation of blankness, for he had passed with a bow that wasn't exactly pleasant, although she could not have told why. What had changed him from the delightful if almost impertinently curious acquaintance of yesterday?

He rounded the promenade and went by again, this time without a glance in her direction, and when he had disappeared on the port deck she rose and went into the main saloon to seat herself at a small desk. The Mother Superior must know that she was safe on the last lap of her homeward journey, and that she was sorry for the anxiety she must have caused. Also there were messages to send to the girls who had been her inseparable friends in that time which seemed so long ago even now, and although it wasn't an easy letter to write she bent to her task assiduously.

Deep in the second page, Miss Deane was only subconsciously aware that another passenger had taken the opposite place, separated by the low rack of stationery, until she looked up and met the blue-gray eyes of Philip Mariott.

"Shall I disturb you?" he asked.

She shook her head, but slid the blotter over the upper part of the page.

"I was just finishing."

In evidence, she added a gushing farewell and signed "Julia Deane" with very black, heavy strokes of her pen, then addressed an envelope to a fictitious girl on a randomly chosen street in Paris. When she had sealed it the young man bent forward and spoke again in a low, hurried tone.

"May I speak to you for a moment, Miss Deane?" He stressed the name. "Will you come over to the settee beside the bookcase? We shall be quite private there and this is urgent!"

There was something almost as unpleasant in his tone as there had been in his earlier greeting, and it was authoritative, actually commanding! For an instant the girl was tempted to refuse, but curiosity got the better of her pique and, nodding coolly, she rose, strolling over to the seat indicated. As he followed she observed:

"I really don't understand in the least! You were almost rude yesterday, Mr. Mariott, and now—? What can you possibly have to say to me in private?"

"Yesterday I was curious about you! today I know." He spoke very brusquely. "We anticipated your return to America about this time and our people very cleverly picked you up within a mile of the convent."

"Do you mean Mr. and Mrs. Graham, from America?" Miss Deane exclaimed in an incredulous but guarded tone. "Who are your people, Monsieur-who-travels-for-a-London-firm?"

"Your story of running away was clever, too." He ignored her question. "Naturally, the sisters will neither deny nor affirm it. Slick work for a little convent girl, but the blood is in you!"

He was jeering at her, actually treating her with contempt! The first person in all her life who dared to speak to her so! Her face went very white.

"Are you trying to pretend that you know who I am? I mean, that I'm not Julia Deane?"

"Still bluffing?" he sneered, but his eyes held a look of disillusionment that was almost pain. "I've been perfectly aware all along that you were Janet Dane; I wonder a more clever alias wasn't provided for you! I wasn't sure of the whole truth until yesterday, but I warn you now you can't get away with it. Your game's up and you're in danger; better drop it before it's too late and turn what you're carrying over to me! I can at least protect you."

"Protect me?" There was loathing in her voice and she shrank from him as though he were some noisome thing. "You insult me! I am Janet Dane, and I am going to my father! Do you know who he is, and what he will do to you for this? Let me pass!"

She swept by him and out in the companionway, but once beyond his hateful view she fairly fled to her stateroom and, locking her door, she sank down on the berth, her face buried in her hands. It was not mistaken identity, after all! Both these horrible people thought she had something tremendously valuable in her possession and were trying to get it from her! But what could it be; how did they think she came by it, and what dreadful sort of creatures were they?

She scarcely touched the luncheon and dinner which were brought to her but paced the narrow cabin in a fever of resentment and fear. If only she were on land, with Daddy! Would to-morrow never come?

At ten a discreet knock came on her door and sh easked, cautiously, who was there.

"A steward, miss," came the respectful answer. "I have something for you from the doctor."

Janet Dane opened the door. A steward indeed stood there alone, proffering a jug and glass on a tray.

"Hot lemon squash, miss," he exclaimed. "The doctor missed you at lunch and dinner, and thought if you were not feeling quite all right this might help you to sleep, miss."

Janet took it, thanked him and relocked her door. She didn't know ship's doctors were so thoughtful when their services were not called in, but the concotion sounded delightful and worry had given her a burning thirst.

At the first sip, however, she eyed the glass askance. It had an odd taste, not quite like any hot lemonade she had taken before. Could it be——? But she mustn't let her nerves get the best of her! Of course the doctor had sent it! Still, she didn't really need it.

Janet hesitated a moment longer, then poured it impulsively down the handbasin, and prepared for bed. If she could sleep a little it would bring the day that much nearer and then she would be free from those odious people forever!

How long she did sleep Janet never knew, but she awakened to find a tiny, sharp gleam of light darting around the stateroom and to hear the rustle of garments and the tinkle of toilet articles being thrown about.

A thief! Instinctively her hand sought the button in the woodwork beside her and, in the sudden glare of light which flooded the room, a crouching woman rose and whirled about. Janet faced Mrs. Carlin's furious, desperate eyes and the glitter of a revolver pointed at her breast!

The Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By Will Rogers

A guy had better keep his mouth busy chewing gum sometimes until he finds out how the land lays. I know a lot of fellows that gets themselves in wrong for life by wise cracks when a wise crack isn't exactly on the program.

There was a nut that was good at spreading the joyful talk, and he met his old college chum on the Pullman. So they smoked and recalled old times.

"Well," says the smart guy, "you ain't still engaged to that Moore girl, I reckon?"

"No."

"Of course not. I always said you'd ditch that jane somehow, although it did look, there in the last year, as though she had you surrounded and your retreat cut off. I told the boys to watch you make your getaway as soon as commencement was over. But how did you manage it, anyhow?"

Helen Harrington Hartt

Mrs. Waker had been out on a shopping expedition, and in an old second hand shop had found two genuine Sixteenth Century blue and white Delft jugs. Treasures!

Of course, when she brought them home there was a great deal of excitement over them, for there was the Delft mark on the bottom of the jugs, and there was the date, 1575.

Contrary to her usual custom, Mrs. Waker, instead of putting the jugs in any reasonable place and asking the children not to touch them, put them on the highest shelf she could find, and then left the room.

She returned unexpectedly and found Robert on a chair, trying to reach the jugs.

Mrs. Waker was a little bit cross, because she had been shopping all day, and whenever she got over tired, she always found it difficult to manage the children.

A little later she came into the room again, and on looking at the jugs, found that one of them had been misplaced and was standing perilously close to the edge of the shelf. Not only that, but Robert was just climbing down from the chair.

Then Mrs. Waker did something that she seldom did, and which she would have told any other mother not to do. She slapped Robert's hands good and hard.

"Now, when I tell you to let things alone, you let them alone," she said with a good deal of spirit.

A blazing look of resentment shot into Robert's eyes. There was no repentance, and when his mother left the room there had been no reconciliation. When she returned, she found him again standing before the shelf, and the other jug had been misplaced.

"Yes," said Robert sullenly; and then, more reasonably, "something got into me, and I was bound I'd touch them."

By this time Mrs. Waker had control of herself and realized that she had not been handling the situation in the right way.

"Robert, dear," she said, putting her arm around her boy—"You must forgive mother for the way she spoke to you. You see I came home very tired—and I was quite, quite unreasonable. I might have known you wouldn't touch the jugs if I asked you not to, but instead, I put them where they were a temptation."

Robert's arms went around his mother's neck and he in turn begged forgiveness for having been so stubborn. And then, they said no more about it.

DISCUSS CITY CHARTER PLAN

Proposals for Amendment Debated at East Lincoln League Meeting.

The proposed change in the city charter was discussed at a meeting of the East Lincoln Civic league at the Twenty-sixth and O streets school Friday evening. The general discussion was a culmination of a series of meetings in which city officials have been brought before the league by present and former city officials.

Supporting the proposed charter Don L. Love told of the benefits which would accrue if it were adopted. He claims that it would be more representative as it would provide for the election of fifteen men from all parts of the city. Thus legislation passed would be passed only after careful consideration and executive matters would be under the direct control of a mayor.

E. E. Duncan, city commissioner and candidate for mayor, defended the present plan. The rejection of tax proposals at the last two city elections is no reflection upon the council, he said. He feels that if the need of additional taxes is presented in the right way to the people they will respond for the welfare of the city. If a mayor is installed who will carefully watch over all the departments and act as a general executive, the present charter need not be amended, the commissioner said.

Speaking for organized labor, Joe Gilbert and Fred Elsler opposed the proposed change. They favor a charter which permits men to be elected from the rank and file of the people. They do not want a representative from each ward or from set off districts of the city. This, they pointed out, would prevent the election of two very capable men from one part of the city to the council.

The talks were all followed by discussions and questions. The league seemed to be divided almost evenly for and against the change.

McMullen Praises Code System To Missouri Solons

Governor McMullen received an inquiry Saturday morning from the Missouri legislature regarding the organization and success of the code system.

A bill has been introduced in the Missouri legislature providing for the adoption of such a system. It is intended to consolidate some eighty-five departments and commissions in the system. When the Nebraska code system was instituted about 25 commissions and departments were consolidated.

The answer of Governor McMullen was full of praise for the system and he suggested that the Missouri legislature give the bill its earnest consideration. An invitation was extended by him to the Missouri legislature to send an investigating committee to Lincoln to make a study of the Nebraska system.

EDITORS CLOSE MEETING HERE

H. D. Leggett of Ord was installed as president of the Nebraska Press association for the coming year at the final session of its three day convention Saturday morning at the Lindell hotel. W. A. Brown of Friend, president during the past year, presented the president's gavel to Mr. Leggett.

A past president's button, a token of appreciation from the association to a past presiding officer, was presented Mr. Brown by Frank Edgecombe of Geneva. Mr. Edgecombe said that Mr. Brown was to be congratulated on the splendid growth the organization had during his term of office.

The importance of the editorial page in any paper and especially in a community paper was brought out in a talk by Dwight Griswold of Gordon. Mr. Griswold explained many ways in which an editorial can be used to forward the interests of the paper and its community.

Accounting in the small office was taken up by Dale Krebs of Scotia, one of the youngest editors in the state. He stated that to be successful a paper must have as good business methods as any other enterprise. He said that it has been just recently that the small town publisher became aware of this fact. Frank Edgecombe and Clayton Snow also spoke on the subject.

W. J. Reynolds of Harvard discussed service to advertisers, stating that the newspaper publisher should work in cooperation with his advertisers in the matter of layout. He explained some of the methods used by his paper in Harvard.

The farmer and the local paper was the topic of J. H. Falloon of Falls City. He stated that all prosperity depends upon the prosperity of the farmer and advised a system of education through the newspaper for better equipment and new methods.

Several matters up before the legislature and congress were discussed by members of the association. All of the topics of the morning meeting were open to discussion from the floor and much comment was had on several important items. The convention officially closed at noon, although members of the official board were to meet with the secretary during the afternoon.

Will Rogers Sees Possibility of "Al" Smith as Kleagle

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 19.—Will Rogers, speaking before the last session of the Alabama legislature last night, urged the southern democrats to let the next national election go by default and urged Alabamans to confine Senator Heflin to telling negro stories in the future.

Al Smith is such a likeable fellow, he told legislators, that after two weeks in Montgomery the local klan would elect him kleagle.

Prohibition is not an issue in the south, he said; it's a commodity. "We're not going to let any Yankee send us back to light wine and beer after drinking corn likker for eight years."

STANDARD LOAF BILL ADVANCED BY SMALL VOTE

Trenmor Cone's standard loaf bread bill, H. R. 200, is not yet out of the woods, though it ran the committee of the whole gauntlet Saturday forenoon and was boosted to the third reading calendar in the state representative diet. With seventy members present, the response of "nays" was almost as loud as that of the "ayes" on sending it ahead. Its fate on final passage will depend on the thirty absentees when they return.

In his speech urging the house to place its approval on the standard loaf bill, Mr. Cone declared he was simply trying to give the consumer a square deal by insuring him an honest weight loaf. The baker, he said, buys all the ingredients according to standard weights and measures fixed by law, and therefore should sell his product on the same basis.

Amendments were added cutting out a cumulatively penalty for second violation, leaving $10 to $100 fine or jail imprisonment not over 30 days to govern each offense, and extending the tolerance of 3 1-2 ounces per pound for variation in weight or loaves to cover a period of 12 hours after delivery to the retailer.

Mr. Porter moved for indefinite postponement, fearing that the bill might prevent housewives baking bread at home and selling it to grocers. It was defeated by a close vote.

The workers came into possession of certificates worth $1,200,000 paid for by them in weekly deductions from pay under the Bell system employe purchase plan.

ALEXANDRIA, Ind.,—(AP)—George Schmauss, 25, sought for the murder Thursday of Opal Hughes, Alexandria police chief, was shot and killed Friday by Walter Hepfer, an Anderson, Ind., patrolman. Hepfer said he found the young man hiding beneath a bed at the Schmauss home, where Hughes was shot when he went to serve a court summons on Schmauss in connection with a divorce complaint filed by his wife. When Schmauss was found Friday he attempted to draw a gun, Hepfer said. Hepfer fired four shots, all of which took effect.

LONDON,—(AP)—The question: "when is a man drunk?" was answered by the report of an expert committee published Friday. The answer is when the person "is so much under the influence of alcohol as to have lost control his faculties to such an extent as to render him unable to explain the occupation in which he is engaged." The committee worked under the auspices of British Medical association sixteen months.

WASHINGTON—(AP)— Additional marines are being sent to Nicaragua, it was said Friday at the white house, because of reports that shipments of arms are on the way into the country from the outside. In addition, under the defense plan, each side will retain one alienist, limiting to five the number of mental experts who would testify.

CHICAGO—(AP)— Practically all the loss of life, injuries to human beings and damage to property due to catastrophes arising from natural causes, such as hurricanes, tornadoes and earthquakes, could be eliminated by the expenditure of 10 to 15 per cent more on the constructions on buildings and complete use of all the modern engineering knowledge and skill now available. This was the declaration made Friday by Dr. Ford A. Carpenter, lecturer on meteorology of the University of California and a manager of the department of meteorology and aeronautics of the Los Angeles chamber of commerce, in an address before the Executives' club here.

GRAIN NOTES.

CHICAGO, Feb. 19.—(AP)—A seaboard interest was reported to have bought 300,000 bushels No. 3 Manitobas at the head of the lakes yesterday, and ordered all rail shipment to the seaboard for export.

One corn man believes prices will go downward until they have reached the level where the export business of fair volume will be attracted.

Reports from Kansas indicate that uch snow that came with the cold wave has been blown and drifted from wheat fields, leaving them poorly protected against zero weather.

Weather conditions over the central west are favorable for movement of corn, but country offerings remain light.

A trade paper observes that the weather has helped western wheat fields, bringing them moisture to relieve dry periods. Advices of freezing and thawing are noted.

A prominent observer thinks that with favorable conditions the Argentine will start to clear new corn in March.

Weekly Trade Review

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Feb. 19.

Bradstreets today said:

"Wholesale trade failed to continue the improvement shown last week, while retailing gained slightly and was about up to the level of a year ago. Industry was more active, with increases in the production of iron and steel and a higher rate of automobile factory operation. Rain and snow and periods of warm weather retarded trade in the middlewest and parts of the southwest, but brought needed moisture to parts in the dry area of the winter wheat belt. Along the south Pacific coast, storms of unusual severity caused floods and landslides and interfered with manufacturing and the distribution of goods. A fair business was done by jobbers in most lines for nearby deliveries, but forward buying has so far been rather disappointing, not having attained the proportions hoped for. Cotton goods, which have moved much more freely since the beginning of the year than other textiles, showed some falling off in sales although wholesalers are apparently satisfied with the orders booked in this line."

Weekly bank clearings, $9,495,432,000, an increase of 4.1 per cent over last year.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.

The railroad stocks again dominated the stoke market today. Despite large volume of week-end profit taking, buying demand for both the investment and the speculative rails was sufficient to keep the forward price move in full swing, with a sprinkling of new high records for the movement established in the first hour

The advance of Erie common to 47½, the highest price in twenty years, was an outstanding incident of the trading in the speculative rails. Demand for the stock market today Despite large of an approval of the taking over of the road by Chesapeake & Ohio as the first constructive step in the formation of the Nickel Plate merger. Nickel Plate (New York, Chicago & St. Louis) sold up to 196⅜, while Chesapeake & Ohio and Pere Marquette continued to attract large buying.

Pennsylvania, Wabash, Delaware & Hudson and other railroad shares sold in large volume in a narrow price range, the heavy week-end offerings effectively blocking any further advances in prices.

A new price cut of 20 cents a barrel in various grades of Pennsylvania crude oil was an unsettling factor in the stocks and the so-called independent oils were offered quite freely. Losses were mostly fractional, however, and some of the stocks in this list, like Skelly and Sinclair, were strong enough to move against the trend.

New forward moves were inaugurated in a number of the specialty stocks, including Allis Chalmers and Radio Corporation, each of which moved up about two points in active trading. General Electric, International Combustion Engineering and Allied Chemical were active and strong as also were Westinghouse Electric and American Smelting.

Selling pressure lifted on the motor and steel stocks and, while the volume of trading in these stocks was comparatively small, prices were well maintained. A few of the mercantile stocks moved upward under the leadership of Montgomery Ward, while utility stocks were also firm in a reduced volume of trading.

Profit taking in the active rails and industrials accounted for a number of moderate reactions in prices in the closing period. But these were more than offset by the aggressive forward movements in the specialty stocks, including the theatrical, electrical equipment and mercantile shares Loews, Inc., at the head of theatrical stocks, sold up three points at 56.

Foreign government bonds and American railroad issues led a moderate rally in the listed bond market today. Buying demand for the Erie convertible 4 per cents caried the price upward an additional point to 92¾, while Delaware & Hudson convertibles sold fractionally higher. The income and adjustment bonds of the western and southern railroad systems were well bought at the best prices for the movement.

Bonds of the European governments and industrial companies rallied fractionally and regained the bulk of Friday's losses. Mexican government bonds were in demand, with the small 4's of 1904 up 2¼ points at 30½, and the small 4's of 1910 up 1 at 24¾. Brazilian government 6½'s sold up ⅝ at 94. The Liberty bond list was quiet, with prices unchanged

Industrial bonds were generally reactionary. Warner Sugar 7 per cents of 1941 lost 1¼ at 103½, and the 7's of 1939 declined about half a point. Wickwire Spencer refunding 7's moved down a point to 48 and Kelly Springfield Tire 8 per cents lost ½ at 102½. Oil bonds were irregular and copper bonds steady.

The railroad stocks and the coppers were strong and active at the opening of the market today. Motor stocks were steady and oil stocks slightly reactionary. Delaware & Hudson led the rails, with a 1-point advance to 184. Atchison was up ⅝ at 172⅜; Norfolk & Western up ⅝ at 171⅞; Pennsylvania up ½ at 60⅝. New Haven down ½ at 56, and Wabash common up ½ at 70½. American Smelting sold up ⅞ at 148½; U. S. Steel was up ¼ at 158¾; General Motors up ⅝ at 156; Nash Motors up ¼ at 66¾; Mid Continent Petroleum down ⅜ at 26⅛; Producers & Refiners down ⅛ at 27.

LIVESTOCK MARKETS.

By the Associated Press.
OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 19.

CATTLE—Receipts, 150. Supplies were not of sufficient size to make a test of the market today and cattle of all classes ruled nominally steady. The week's trade has been uneven, with the trend of values mostly a little higher on the better grades. Good to choice steers are strong to 25c or more up, heavies showing the full advance. Plain to medium yearlings and light steers, however, have been dull and showed weakness. She stock is steady to 25c higher, good grades getting the upturn. Good stockers and feeders also show a little improvement while the plain thin classes have been draggy sellers.

Closing—Compared with a week ago: Fed steers and yearlings uneven; good and choice mediumweights and weighty steers 15@25c higher, plain, warmed up light kinds weak to 25c lower; others mostly steady; she stock strong; bulls weak to 15c lower; veals 50c lower; stockers and feeders strong; bulks for the week: Fed steers and yearlings $8.75@10.75; yearlings $11; mediumweights $11.25; weighty steers $11.60, slaughter heifers $7@8.50; beef cows $5.25@6.50, all cutters, $4@4.75; medium bulls $5.50@6; practical top veals $10.50, few at $11.50; stockers and feeders $7.75@8.75; Wyoming feeders $8.15.

SHEEP—None. All classes nominally unchanged. Trade in fat lambs has shown a fair tone all week and final sales are 50 to 60c higher than a week ago with spots on some weighty lambs showing more advance. Features of the week's market were the keen competition that developed on light lambs and extreme unevenness in the trade in heavy offerings. Feeders show very little change for the six days. Aged sheep continued in light supply and this class ruled 25 to 35c higher than a week ago

ARMY AVIATORS MISSING AT SEA

Little Hope Held For Pair Forced Down On East Coast Thursday.

MITCHELL FIELD, N. J., Feb. 19.—(I. N. S.)—All hope for the safety of Lieuts. Willard J. Harris and William A. Gray, army aviators, was abandoned today following the positive identification of wing and strut fragaments found in the sea off the New Jersey coast as parts of the De Haviland plane in which the two fliers left here Thursday for their home station at Langley field, Va.

While no official announcement has been made yet, it was informally admitted that hope had been abandoned. A preliminary report will be made to Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick in Washington today, and he is expected to order the routine investigation.

The two aviators left in bad weather, and shortly after they took off a dense fog settled over the coast. It is supposed by their brother officers that they became confused, and probably crashed into the high running sea, smashing their plane.

At first it was thought that the men might have been picked up by a passing boat, but it was admitted this afternoon that large craft would have reported by radio, while a small boat would have docked by this time.

Two planes held in readiness here, and four others and Langley field, were prevented today by the treacherous weather from undertaking a search for the two officers, who have been forty hours at the mercy of a pounding sea. Col. B. D. Foulois expressed his belief that the men could not have survived.

Lieutenant Harris' home was in Williamsport, Pa., while Lieutenant Gray came from Everett, Mass.

SEASIDE PARK, N. J., Feb. 19.—(I. N. S.)—Strong winds accompanied by heavy rain and a very rought sea caused officials of the Fifth coast guard district to abandon hope today of rescuing Lieuts. Willard J. Harris and William A. Gray, army fliers, who left Mitchel field, N. Y., in a De Haviland airplane Thursday afternoon for Langley field, Va., and are believed to have fallen into the sea near here. A dense fog still hung over the coast this morning.

Pieces of a wing, propeller parts and other sections of a plane have been found in the water near Island Park. Included were wooden struts, strips of fabric and two wheels.

All nearby coast guard stations received instructions to be on the lookout for the missing fliers.

Maj. Howard C. Davidson, operations officer at Mitchell field, and Capt. H. M. McClelland, post adjutant, who were sent to Island Beach yesterday, reported today to Col. B. D. Foulois, commander of Mitchell field, that the parts of a plane washed up by the sea were from the machine used by Harris and Gray.

Dr. Webster Tells Of Dental Work

Declaring himself heartily in favor of dental clinics in all public schools Dr. Fred W. Webster spoke on "Dentistry" before the Professional Men's club at the noon luncheon today at the Lincoln hotel. He related the less than one hundred year history of the dental profession. It was definitely separated from the medical profession in 1840.

He spoke of the recent developments and discoveries which have tended to bring it back toward the general medical field. Many diseases of the body can be traced to infectious teeth, he pointed out, and both a physician and dentist is needed to administer proper treatment in such cases. The prevalence of diseases of the mouth has resulted in closely binding the work of the dentist and the physician.

Found Guilty.—Charles Campbell, colored, was found guilty of sale of liquor after a hearing in Municipal court Saturday, and Judge Chappell fined him $100 and costs and sentenced him to 60 days in the county jail.

and was made just to see the country. His parents, he said, are not living.

"If you would let me go now, I never would put my hand on a gun again," he assured the court.

The Skinner drug store, owned by E. P. Skinner, is situated on the west side of Eleventh street near G street. It has been the victim of holdups and robberies on several other occasions.

Elven White is a graduate of the York, Neb., high school, and studied pharmacy at the state university for three years. He lives with his parents at 445 South Twenty-ninth. He is unmarried.

Two Customers In Store

Friday night Elven White, the clerk, was preparing to close up the store: It was midnight. Two customers, both of whom are acquainted with White, were sitting in refreshment booths near the front of the building. There is a line of booths in the center of the store. The customers were Fred Enders, a mechanic at the Motor Out company, who rooms at the home of Jake White, night police sergeant, 1341 F street; and Leon Dahms, musician, 835 South Eleventh.

The hold-up man entered the front door, from where he was unable to see the two customers, seeing only Elven White. Burke, who at first gave the name of Perry Klerc pulled a gun and ordered White to put up his hands.

When Burke saw the two customers, he marched White, at the point of the gun, over to them, then ordered all to put up their hands. He went to the cash register, on the south side of the store near the front, and looked into the till, which contained a small amount of cash.

White told him Mr. Skinner, "the boss", had taken it.

"That don't go with me." Burke replied, and he ordered the three men to the rear room of the place of business. There Burke found a can containing about $30, and searched Fred Enders, taking $1.50 from him. Burke did not search the other customer, Dahms, after the latter told him he had no money.

When the trio had been marched to the front of the store Burke decided to have another look at the cash register. That was the disastrous move. When he stepped behind the counter, his back was turned to his three victims. Enders and Dahms were at about the center of the store, and the clerk, White, was near the rear room.

Clerk Obtains Revolver.

White slipped into the back room. Obtaining a revolver, he returned and just as he came into the main part of the store, ordered the holdup man to hold up his hands.

At this time Elven White was standing behind the showcases on the south side of the room. The two men were ranged almost opposite each other.

Burke wheeled at White's command, immediately drawing up his pistol and pulling the trigger. But the firearm didn't function properly, and there was no shot. Then Burke and White fired almost at the same time. The exchange of shots went on until both weapons were emptied of shells, and the two men met near the front of the store.

White's one arm was practically useless, and blood was flowing freely from the wound. But he grappled with Burke and the two struggled, coming gradually nearer and nearer to the front door. Finally they went to the sidewalk, and Fred Enders joined in the tussle to hold Burke, Leon Dahms meanwhile ran to his home a few doors south and called police.

The gun battle in the store and the ensuing commotion awakened many of the neighbors near the scene. Ray Pote, a barber, 735 South Eleventh, was the first to arrive, and he joined in the fight. Ed Todd, colored, 714 South Eleventh, also ran to the scene and helped to hold Burke until officers arrived. Capt. V. G. Huskea, 740 South Eleventh a military instructor at the state university, was another of those who aided in subduing Burke.

Later during the night, Police Lieutenant Joe Rymer searched Burke's room and arrested his room mate, giving the name of Rudolph Schoba. Schoba, according to Rymer, admitted ownership of a traveling bag in which were found a number of shells fitting the gun Burke used in the holdup.

Dr. George E. Lewis said that Burke was weak, extremely nervous after the holdup Friday night. His heart action was bad, but he gradually recovered himself. On the other hand, Elven White, who was injured was cool and collected after he was taken to the hospital. There was very little danger in White's condition.

Sudden Postponement Miss Simms' Wedding Leads To An Inquiry

CHICAGO, Feb. 19. —(AP)— A new angle to the sudden postponement of the marriage of Miss Charlotte Simms, Dayton society girl, to Kenyon Anthony Stoddard, set for today, has come to light with the information that a marriage license was issued to the two at Newport, Ky., last October 24.

The Herald and Examiner, quoting dispatches from Cincinnati, which is across the river from Newport, said they were married at the Kentucky town the same day by Magistrate Thomas Hanly.

This report of a secret marriage is certainly startling, said Ferdinand W. Peck, jr., son of the pioneer Chicagoan and uncle of Miss Simms. "Knowing Charlotte as I do, it seems incredible to me that she would go through such a ceremony without consulting or confiding in her mother."

Miss Simms and her mother are enroute to Florida, while Stoddard, who was served earlier in the week with a divorce action summons in the presence of his fiancee's father, has departed from Dayton for Philadelphia with the announced intention of spiking reports of his arriage to another bride there in 1922.

The divorce suit was brought by Edith Widing of Portland, Me., who, according to the service papers, stated she married him in April, 1922, when he used the name of Herman Albrecht Yaffee. Dispatches from Portland said no such divorce action was on record there.

Mr. Peck said he knew Stoddard had at one time used an assumed name.

Ready to Prosecute.

DAYTON, O., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Charles H. Simms, father of Charlotte Simms, who is reported to have married Kenyon Anthony Stoddard at Newport, Ky., last October, today declared he would prosecute Stoddard if it is proved that he married the girl while the husband of another woman in Portland, Me.

Stoddard's wedding to Miss Simms, set for today, was postponed earlier in the week when he was [illegible] with a divorce action, filed by Edith Adding, who asserted she had married him in 1922 under the name of Herman Albrecht Yaffee.

Hundreds of the strikers held forth before the postoffice this morning, armed with sticks, and barred all entry to the premises. Inside the building the workers wore armbands inscribed: "Welcome to Chiang Kai-Shek. The pickets were finally disarmed, following a series of minor clashes with the police.

Sixteen thousand Shantung troops, a part of Chang Tso-Lin's forces, were reported moving along the Hankow-Peking railway today to support Marshal Wu Pei-Fu's left flank in an attack on the Cantonese.

The military and police are in control of the entire city, both inside and outside of the foreign settlement.

Sun Reported Isolated.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 19. —(I. N. S.)—Events moved swiftly today toward wheat appeared to be the final chapter in the Cantonese drive for the possession of Shanghai. Active fighting in the immediate vicinity o fthe city appeared imminent today.

General Sun Chuan-Fang was reported isolated with a force of 40,000 men at Chaqu, about sixty miles from Shanghai, fighting desperately to stay the advance of the on-driving southerners.

The Sun Shuan-Fang division stationed at Shanghai began throwing up defense works immediately outside the city. This is on a broad, open plain, dotted with hundreds of huge earth mounds which mark Chinese graves.

Meantime, trouble was promised within the city itself over the week-end. A general three day strike celebrating the nationalist victories was partially inaugurated this morning. Street cars, omnibuses, the postoffice, cotton mills, department stores and numerous other industries were affected. It was estimated 80,000 workers are idle, and the authorities believe approximately 250,000 will participate in the strike over Sunday and Monday.

The fear is growing the workers may not resume work on Tuesday, although the walkout order of the general labor union specified a three day demonstration only

BOYER REMAINS ARE NOT FOUND

Second Day Of Digging Brings No Trace Of Body Of Rancher.

OSHKOSH, Neb., Feb. 19.—(By the Associated Press.)—After two days of unsuccessful digging, the search was resumed today for the 14 year old grave of Frank Boyer, western Nebraska homesteader, confessed by his widow and her common law husband, Henry Boyer, also Frank's nephew, to have been slain by Henry's brother, Tom, and buried behind the barn on his lonely homestead in the sandhills of northeast Garden county.

Henry has directed the search, confident of locating the grave at the desolate spot where his uncle's barn once stood, but constant digging and excavation of deep trenches failed to reveal any traces of the grave.

Mrs. Minnie Boyer, 37 year old widow, who is held in a private home here, is likewise confident she knows the location of the grave, in which she says the two nephews rolled her husband's body while she held a lantern. She has been excused from accompanying the searching posse across the 40 miles of sand hills to the scene of the digging, but Friday night she indicated a desire to direct the search herself if the diggers are not soon successful.

According to the confessions, the elder Boyer was "accidentally though conveniently shot and killed" by his nephews. Following the burial, Tom left the ranch that night while Henry remained with his uncle's widow.

County attorney F. A. Dutton said no action could be taken against Mrs. Boyer and Henry if the body is not found.

M'NARY-HAUGEN BILL VETO BY COOLIDGE SEEN

the president vetoed the bill, the forces behind it would come back stronger than ever next year because the "principle in the bill cannot be downed without a trial."

Congress Drives Ahead.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—(By the Associated Press.)—With major measures sent to President Coolidge during this week, congress hopes to further clear its legislative decks before its sixty-ninth session ends March 4.

Counting the enacted McNary-Haugen farm relief, McFadden branch banking and radio control rolls as important legislative achievements, the senate and house are now faced with the untangling of the long controverted Boulder canyon legislation as a major task in the time remaining.

Another problem is likely to flare up in the three cruiser construction program, called for in the navy appropriation bill, in view of developments in the president's naval limitation proposal. This measure, with other supply measures, including army appropriations, public buildings and deficiency bills, also remain on the calendar. With this prospect, both chambers face night sessions, the senate commencing a series next week.

Radio Bill Approved.

The president, who now receives the bill, is expected to sign it next week and to send to the senate before adjournment the names of the commission's members.

Meanwhile Mr. Coolidge also is considering the McNary-Haugen and McFadden bills. While there is no doubt that the branch banking legislation will receive his signature, the president's reaction to the farm relief bill is being watched with extreme interest.

GRAIN NOTES.

CHICAGO, Feb. 19.—(AP)—A seaboard interest was reported to have bought 300,000 bushels No. 2 Manitobas at the head of the lakes yesterday, and ordered all rail shipment to the seaobard for export.

One corn man believes prices will go downward until they have reached the level where the export business of fair volume will be attracted.

Reports from Kansas indicate that uch snow that came with the cold wave has been blown and drifted from wheat fields, leaving them poorly protected against zero weather.

Weather conditions over the central west are favorable for movement of corn, but country offerings remain light.

A trade paper observes that the weather has helped western wheat fields, bringing them moisture to relieve dry periods. Advices of freezing and thawing are noted.

A prominent observer thinks that with favorable conditions the Argentine will start to clear new corn in March.

Weekly Trade Review

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Feb. 19.

Bradstreets today said:

"Wholesale trade failed to continue the improvement shown last week, while retailing gained slightly and was about up to the level of a year ago. Industry was more active, with increases in the production of iron and steel and a higher rate of automobile factory operation. Rain and snow and periods of warm weather retarded trade in the middlewest and parts of the southwest, but brought needed moisture to parts in the dry area of the winter wheat belt. Along the south Pacific coast, storms of unusual severity caused floods and landslides and interfered with manufacturing and the distribution of goods. A fair business was done by jobbers in most lines for nearby deliveries, but forward buying has so far been rather disappointing, not having attained the proportions hoped for. Cotton goods, which have moved much more freely since the beginning of the year than other textiles, showed some falling off in sales although wholesalers are apparently satisfied with the orders booked in this line."

Weekly bank clearings, $9,495,432,000, an increase of 4.1 per cent over last year.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.

The railroad stocks again dominated the stoke market today. Despite large volume of week-end profit taking, buying demand for both the investment and the speculative rails was sufficient to keep the forward price move in full swing, with a sprinkling of new high records for the movement established in the first hour.

The advance of Erie common to 47⅛, the highest price in twenty years, was an outstanding incident of the trading in the speculative rails. Demand for the stock market today. Despite large of an approval of the taking over of the road by Chesapeake & Ohio as the first constructive step in the formation of the Nickel Plate merger. Nickel Plate (New York, Chicago & St. Louis) sold up to 196½, while Chesapeake & Ohio and Pere Marquette continued to attract large buying.

Pennsylvania, Wabash, Delaware & Hudson and other railroad shares sold in large volume in a narrow price range, the heavy week-end offerings effectively blocking any further advances in prices.

A new price cut of 20 cents a barrel in various grades of Pennsylvania crude oil was an unsettling factor in the stocks and the so-called independent oils were offered quite freely. Losses were mostly fractional, however, and some of the stocks in this list, like Skelly and Sinclair, were strong enough to move against the trend.

New forward moves were inaugurated in a number of the specialty stocks, including Allis Chalmers and Radio Corporation, each of which moved up about two points in active trading. General Electric, International Combustion Engineering and Allied Chemical were active and strong as also were Westinghouse Electric and American Smelting.

Selling pressure lifted on the motor and steel stocks and, while the volume of trading in these stocks was comparatively smball, prices were well maintained. A few of the mercantile stocks moved upward under the leadership of Montgomery Ward, while utility stocks were also firm in a reduced volume of trading.

Profit taking in the active rails and industrials accounted for a number of moderate reactions in prices in the closing period. But these were more than offset by the aggressive forward movements in the specialty stocks, including the theatrical, electrical equipment and mercantile shares. Loews, Inc., at the head of theatrical stocks, sold up three points at 56.

Foreign government bonds and American railroad issues led a moderate rally in the listed bond market today. Buying demand for the Erie convertible 4 per cents caried the price upward an additional point to 92¼, while Delaware & Hudson convertibles sold fractionally higher. The income and adjustment bonds of the western and southern railroad systems were well bought at the best prices for the movement.

Bonds of the European governments and industrial companies rallied fractionally and regained the bulk of Friday's losses. Mexican government bonds were in demand, with the small 4's of 1904 up 2¼ points at 36½, and the small 4's of 1910 up 1 at 24¾. Brazilian government 6½'s sold up ¾ at 94. The Liberty bond list was quiet, with prices unchanged.

Industrial bonds were generally reactionary. Warner Sugar 7 per cents of 1941 lost 1¼ at 103½, and the 7's of 1939 declined about half a point. Wickwire Spencer refunding 7's moved down a point to 48 and Kelly Springfield Tire 8 per cents lost ½ at 102½. Oil bonds were irregular and copper bonds steady.

The railroad stocks and the coppers were strong and active at the opening of the market today. Motor stocks were steady and oil stocks slightly reactionary. Delaware & Hudson led the rails, with a 1-point advance to 184. Atchison was up ⅜ at 172⅜; Norfolk & Western up ⅜ at 171⅞; Pennsylvania up ½ at 60⅜. New Haven down ½ at 56, and Wabash common up ½ at 70⅛. American Smelting sold up ⅞ at 148½; U. S. Steel was up ⅛ at 158⅜; General Motors up ⅜ at 156; Nash Motors up ¼ at 66¼; Mid Continent Petroleum down ⅜ at 36⅛; Producers & Refiners down ⅝ at 27.

By the Associated Press.
OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 19.

CATTLE—Receipts, 150. Supplies were not of sufficient size to make a test of the market today and cattle of all classes ruled nominally steady. The week's trade has been uneven, with the trend of values mostly a little higher on the better grades. Good to choice steers are strong to 25c or more up, heavies showing the full advance. Plain to medium yearlings and light steers, however, have been dull and showed weakness. She stock is steady to 25c higher, good grades getting the upturn. Good stockers and feeders also show a little improvement while the plain thin classes have been draggy sellers.

Closing—Compared with a week ago: Fed steers and yearlings uneven; good and choice mediumweights and weighty steers 15@25c higher; plain, warmed up light kinds weak to 25c lower; others mostly steady; she stock strong; bulls weak to 15c lower; veals 50c lower; stockers and feeders strong; bulks for the week: Fed steers and yearlings $8.75@10.75; yearlings $11; mediumweights $11.25; weighty steers $11.60; slaughter heifers $7@8.50; beef cows $5.25@6.50; all cutters $4@4.75; edium bulls $5.50@6; practical top veals $10.50, few at $11.50; stockers and feeders $7.75@8.75; Wyoming feeders $9.15.

HOGS—Receipts, 7,000. Demand was rather indifferent and the fair Saturday run on offer moved slowly at steady to mostly 10 to 15c lower prices. Bulk of sales was at $11.35@11.60; top, $11.60; prices are steady to 10c lower for the week.

SHEEP—None. All classes nominally unchanged. Trade in fat lambs has shown a fair tone all week and final sales are 50 to 60c higher than a week ago with spots on some weighty lambs showing more advance. Features of the week's market were the keen competition that developed on light lambs and extreme unevenness in the trade in heavy offerings. Feeders show very little change for the six days. Aged sheep continued in light supply and this class ruled 25 to 35c higher than a week ago.

Closing—Compared with a week ago: Fat lambs, fully 60c higher; sheep 25@35c higher; feeders strong; closing bulks follows; fed wool lambs $12.75@13.35; top, $13.50; fed clipped lambs $11.60; slaughter ewes $8.50@9; top $9.10; feeding lambs $12.80@13.15.

ARMY AVIATORS MISSING AT SEA

Little Hope Held For Pair Forced Down On East Coast Thursday.

MITCHELL FIELD, N. J., Feb. 19.—(I. N. S.)—All hope for the safety of Lieuts. Willard J. Harris and William A. Gray, army aviators, was abandoned today following the positive identification of wing and strut fragaments found in the sea off the New Jersey coast as parts of the De Haviland plane in which the two fliers left here Thursday for their home station at Langley field, Va.

While no official announcement has been made yet, it was informally admitted that hope had been abandoned. A preliminary report will be made to Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick in Washington today, and he is expected to order the routine investigation.

The two aviators left in bad weather, and shortly after they took off a dense fog settled over the coast. It is supposed by their brother officers that they became confused, and probably crashed into the high running sea, smashing their plane.

At first it was thought that the men might have been picked up by a passing boat, but it was admitted this afternoon that large craft would have reported by radio, while a small boat would have docked by this time.

Two planes held in readiness here, and four others and Langley field, were prevented today by the treacherous weather from undertaking a search for the two officers, who have been forty hours at the mercy of a pounding sea. Col. B. D. Foulois expressed his belief that the men could not have survived.

Lieutenant Harris' home was in Williamsport, Pa., while Lieutenant Gray came from Everett, Mass.

SEASIDE PARK, N. J., Feb. 19.—(I. N. S.)—Strong winds accompanied by heavy rain and a very rought sea caused officials of the Fifth coast guard district to abandon hope today of rescuing Lieuts. Willard J. Harris and William A. Gray, army fliers, who left Mitchel field, N. Y., in a De Haviland airplane Thursday afternoon for Langley field, Va., and are believed to have fallen into the sea near here. A dense fog still hung over the coast this morning.

Pieces of a wing, propeller parts and other sections of a plane have been found in the water near Island Park. Included were wooden struts, strips of fabric and two wheels.

All nearby coast guard stations received instructions to be on the lookout for the missing fliers.

Maj. Howard C. Davidson, operations officer at Mitchell field, and Capt. H. M. McClelland, post adjutant, who were sent to Island Beach yesterday, reported today to Col. B. D. Foulois, commander of Mitchell field, that the parts of a plane washed up by the sea were from the machine used by Harris and Gray.

Dr. Webster Tells Of Dental Work

Declaring himself heartily in favor of dental clinics in all public schools Dr. Fred W. Webster spoke on "Dentistry" before the Professional Men's club at the noon luncheon today at the Lincoln hotel. He related the less than one hundred year history of the dental profession. It was definitely separated from the medical profession in 1840.

He spoke of the recent developments and discoveries which have tended to bring it back toward the general medical field. Many diseases of the body can be traced to infectious teeth, he pointed out, and both a physician and dentist is needed to administer proper treatment in such cases. The prevalence of diseases of the mouth has resulted in closely binding the work of the dentist and the physician.

Found Guilty.—Charles Campbell, colored, was found guilty of sale of liquor after a hearing in Municipal court Saturday, and Judge Chappell fined him $100 and costs and sentenced him to 60 days in the county jail.

and was made just to see the country. His parents, he said, are not living.

"If you would let me go now, I never would put my hand on a gun again," he assured the court.

The Skinner drug store, owned by E. P. Skinner, is situated on the west side of Eleventh street near G street. It has been the victim of holdups and robberies on several other occasions.

Elven White is a graduate of the York, Neb., high school, and studied pharmacy at the state university for three years. He lives with his parents at 445 South Twenty-ninth. He is unmarried.

Two Customers In Store

Friday night Elven White, the clerk, was preparing to close up the store: It was midnight. Two customers, both of whom are acquainted with White, were sitting in refreshment booths near the front of the building. There is a line of booths in the center of the store. The customers were Fred Enders, a mechanic at the Motor Out company, who rooms at the home of Jake White, night police sergeant, 1341 F street; and Leon Dahms, musician, 835 South Eleventh.

The hold-up man entered the front door, from where he was unable to see the two customers, seeing only Elven White. Burke, who at first gave the name of Perry Klerc pulled a gun and ordered White to put up his hands.

When Burke saw the two customers, he marched White, at the point of the gun, over to them, then ordered all to put up their hands. He went to the cash register, on the south side of the store near the front, and looked into the till, which contained a small amount of cash.

White told him Mr. Skinner, "the boss", had taken it.

"That don't go with me," Burke replied, and he ordered the three men to the rear room of the place of business. There Burke found a can containing about $30, and searched Fred Enders, taking $1.50 from him. Burke did not search the other customer, Dahms, after the latter told him he had no money.

When the trio had been marched to the front of the store Burke decided to have another look at the cash register. That was the disastrous move. When he stepped behind the counter, his back was turned to his three victims. Enders and Dahms were at about the center of the store, and the clerk, White, was near the rear room.

Clerk Obtains Revolver.

White slipped into the back room. Obtaining a revolver, he returned and just as he came into the main part of the store, ordered the holdup man to hold up his hands.

At this time Elven White was standing behind the showcases on the south side of the room. The two men were ranged almost opposite each other.

Burke wheeled at White's command, immediately drawing up his pistol and pulling the trigger. But the firearm didn't function properly, and there was no shot. Then Burke and White fired almost at the same time. The exchange of shots went on until both weapons were emptied of shells, and the two men met near the front of the store.

White's one arm was practically useless, and blood was flowing freely from the wound. But he grappled with Burke and the two struggled, coming gradually nearer and nearer to the front door. Finally they went to the sidewalk, and Fred Enders joined in the tussle to hold Burke, Leon Dahms meanwhile ran to his home a few doors south and called police.

The gun battle in the store and the ensuing commotion awakened many of the neighbors near the scene. Ray Pote, a barber, 735 South Eleventh, was the first to arrive, and he joined in the fight. Ed Todd, colored, 714 South Eleventh, also ran to the scene and helped to hold Burke until officers arrived. Capt. V. G. Huskea, 740 South Eleventh a military instructor at the state university, was another of those who aided in subduing Burke.

Later during the night, Police Lieutenant Joe Rymer searched Burke's room and arrested his room mate, giving the name of Rudolph Schoba. Schoba, according to Rymer, admitted ownership of a traveling bag in which were found a number of shells fitting the gun Burke used in the holdup.

Dr. George E. Lewis said that Burke was weak, extremely nervous after the holdup Friday night. His heart action was bad, but he gradually recovered himself. On the other hand, Elven White, who was injured was cool and collected after he was taken to the hospital. There was very little danger in White's condition.

Sudden Postponement Miss Simms' Wedding Leads To An Inquiry

CHICAGO, Feb. 19. —(AP)— A new angle to the sudden postponement of the marriage of Miss Charlotte Simms, Dayton society girl, to Kenyon Anthony Stoddard, set for today, has come to light with the information that a marriage license was issued to the two at Newport, Ky., last October 24.

The Herald and Examiner, quoting dispatches from Cincinnati, which is across the river from Newport, said they were married at the Kentucky town the same day by Magistrate Thomas Hanly.

This report of a secret marriage is certainly startling, said Ferdinand W. Peck, jr., son of the pioneer Chicagoan and uncle of Miss Simms. "Knowing Charlotte as I do, it seems incredible to me that she would go through such a ceremoney without consulting or confiding in her mother."

Miss Simms and her mother are enroute to Florida, while Stoddard, who was served earlier in the week with a divorce action summons in the presence of his fiancee's father, has departed from Dayton for Philadelphia with the announced intention of spiking reports of his arriage to another bride there in 1922.

The divorce suit was brought by Edith Widing of Portland, Me., who, according to the service papers, stated she married him in April, 1922, when he used the name of Herman Albrecht Yaffee. Dispatches from Portland said no such divorce action was on record there.

Mr. Peck said he knew Stoddard had at one time used an assumed name.

Ready to Prosecute.

DAYTON, O., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Charles H. Simms, father of Charlotte Simms, who is reported to have married Kenyon Anthony Stoddard at Newport, Ky., last October, today declared he would prosecute Stoddard if it is proved that he married the girl while the husband of another woman in Portland, Me.

Stoddard's wedding to Miss Simms, set for today, was postponed earlier in the week when he was with a divorce action, filed by Edith Adding, who asserted she had married him in 1922 under the name of Herman Albrecht Yaffee.

Hundreds of the strikers held forth before the postoffice this morning, armed with sticks, and barred all entry to the premises. Inside the building the workers wore armbands inscribed: "Welcome to Chiang Kai-Shek. The pickets were finally disarmed, following a series of minor clashes with the police.

Sixteen thousand Shantung troops, a part of Chang Tso-Lin's forces, were reported moving along the Hankow-Peking railway today to support Marshal Wu Pei-Fu's left flank in an attack on the Cantonese.

The military and police are in control of the entire city, both inside and outside of the foreign settlement.

Sun Reported Isolated.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 19. —(I. N. S.)—Events moved swiftly today toward wheat appeared to be the final chapter in the Cantonese drive for the possession of Shanghai. Active fighting in the immediate vicinity o fthe city appeared imminent today.

General Sun Chuan-Fang was reported isolated with a force of 40,000 men at Chapu, about sixty miles from Shanghai, fighting desperately to stay the advance of the on-driving southerners.

The Sun Shuan-Fang division stationed at Shanghai began throwing up defense works immediately outside the city. This is on a broad, open plain, dotted with hundreds of huge earth mounds which mark Chinese graves.

Meantime, trouble was promised within the city itself over the weekend. A general three day strike celebrating the nationalist victories was partially inaugurated this morning. Street cars, omnibuses, the postoffice, cotton mills, department stores and numerous other industries were affected. It was estimated 80,000 workers are idle, and the authorities believe approximately 250,000 will participate in the strike over Sunday and Monday.

The fear is growing the workers may not resume work on Tuesday, although the walkout order of the general labor union specified a three day demonstration only

BOYER REMAINS ARE NOT FOUND

Second Day Of Digging Brings No Trace Of Body Of Rancher.

OSHKOSH, Neb., Feb. 19.—(By the Associated Press.)—After two days of unsuccessful digging, the search was resumed today for the 14 year old grave of Frank Boyer, western Nebraska homesteader, confessed by his widow and her common law husband, Henry Boyer, also Frank's nephew, to have been slain by Henry's brother, Tom, and buried behind the barn on his lonely homestead in the sandhills of northeast Garden county.

Henry has directed the search, confident of locating the grave at the desolate spot where his uncle's barn once stood, but constant digging and excavation of deep trenches failed to reveal any traces of the grave.

Mrs. Minnie Boyer, 37 year old widow, who is held in a private home here, is likewise confident she knows the location of the grave, in which she says the two nephews rolled her husband's body while she held a lantern. She has been excused from accompanying the searching posse across the 40 miles of sand hills to the scene of the digging, but Friday night she indicated a desire to direct the search herself if the diggers are not soon successful.

According to the confessions, the elder Boyer was "accidentally though conveniently shot and killed" by his nephews. Following the burial, Tom left the ranch that night while Henry remained with his uncle's widow.

County attorney F. A. Dutton said no action could be taken against Mrs. Boyer and Henry if the body is not found.

the president vetoed the bill, the forces behind it would come back stronger than ever next year because the "principle in the bill cannot be downed without a trial."

Congress Drives Ahead.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—(By the Associated Press.)—With major measures sent to President Coolidge during this week ,congress hopes to further clear its legislative decks before its sixty-ninth session ends March 4.

Counting the enacted McNary-Haugen farm relief, McFadden branch banking and radio control rolls as important legislative achievements, the senate and house are new faced with the untangling of the long controverted Boulder canyon legislation as a major task in the time remaining.

Another problem is likely to flare up in the three cruiser construction program, called for in the navy appropriation bill, in view of developments in the president's naval limitation proposal. This measure, with other supply measures, including army appropriations, public buildings and deficiency bills, also remain on the calendar. With this prospect, both chambers face night sessions ,the senate commencing a series next week.

Radio Bill Approved.

Final congressional approval of the radio control bill, which establishes a federal commission of five members to adjudicate controversies in that industry, was given yesterday by the senate.

The president, who now receives the bill, is erpected to sign it next week an dto send to the senate before adjournment the names of the commission's members.

Meanwhile Mr. Coolidge also is considering the McNary-Haugen and McFadden bills. While there is no doubt that the branch banking legislation will receive his signature, the president's reaction to the farm relief bill is being watched with extreme interest.

THE WEATHER

A trough of low pressure extends along the eastern slope of the Rockies attended by cloudy and warmer weather throughout the great plains and the Missouri valley, with light snow in western Nebraska and western Kansas. Another storm area covers the southeastern states, causing heavy rain in Florida and moderate rain in the other Atlantic and gulf states. High pressure and cooler but still cloudy weather appear in California, and falling pressure attended by rain in the north Pacific states.

BOSTON BOY IN SLASHING WIN

And with Maloney's decisive, clean cut victory by decision came realization to the 18,184 spectators that a good big man can whip a good little man every time. Weight—a decisive margin of 31 pounds—and a merciless attack which never knew a backward step—defeated Delaney.

Beat Down Jack's Defense.

From the opening gong, the Boston giant threw his bulk on to his 172-pound rival. Two massive arms drove gruelling smashes through the best guard the Bridgeport, Conn., rapier could offer, while a flinty jaw and bulging muscled body absorbed the mightiest shots of Delaney's crashing broadsides. The result was inevitable. Most ring side critics awarded Maloney six rounds by decisive margins, Delaney two by a shade, with two even.

There were no knockdowns. Although Delaney's vaunted right hand smash and uppercut landed clean and true on Maloney's jaw time and again, the Boston burly was too big, too strong and too steeped in reserve power to be forced to more than shake his shaggy head like an irritated grizzly and crash forward for more.

Boston Backers Cleared Up.

The result, a startling upset in view of the 13 to 5 odds on Delaney at gong-time, sent a host of Boston supporters, their pockets crammed with money, back on the midnight train. Boston had backed its warrior to the limit.

Out of the Delaney debacle, however, came word that the sparkling French-Canadian in the third round had aggravated an old thumb injury suffered in the last match with Paul Berlenbach. Although the thumb was badly swollen, it was not definitely established that the bone was broken. Otherwise, the total visible injuries consisted of a black eye for Maloney and cut lips for Delaney.

Victor Once Knocked Out.

The rise of Maloney in the heavyweight division had been spasmodic up to last night. In his 31 ring contests he has scored 15 knockouts and won 13 decisions. He was knocked out once, by Leo Gates, the Indian, in four rounds in 1924. After winning from another Boston favorite, Jack Sharkey, in 10 rounds in 1924, Maloney lost to his fellow townsman twice in 1925—once by decision and again on a foul. Maloney is 24 years old and has two children.

In the throng that saw the fight were three governors—Moore, of New Jersey, Fuller of Massachusetts and Ritchie of Maryland, while only a prior engagement prevented the presence of Governor Smith of New York.

Many Notables Present.

In addition to notables of the society, stags and screen worlds, sportsmen and high government officials, the percentage of women in the audience was extremely high, being estimated at 20 per cent of the lower floor capacity.

The fight was part of Tex Rickard's elimination tournament to decide Gene Tunney's challenger next September. Maloney probably will be matched with the winner of the Sharkey-McTigue fight at Madison Square Garden March 3.

Three Governors Wire to Coolidge On Farm Measure

Governor McMullen has received word from the governors of Wisconsin, Iowa, and Illinois stating that they have sent messages to President Coolidge urging that he sign the McNary-Haugen bill.

McMullen addressed a message to the president Friday and also urged the governors of the middlewestern states to take similar action.

Speed Marks Penn Attack This Year

BY SOL METZGER.

The game that gave Penn pennant hopes in the eastern intercollegiate league, her defeat of the Navy, brought out the fact that Captain Davenport is one of the star college players of the year. Penn broke through the Navy's defense that had previously proven invulnerable by reason of her mastery of quick pivoting and change of pace. One incident will illustrate the alert play of the Red and Blue.

Davenport received a pass and was charged from the right by a Navy guard. But as the ball reached him, just a fraction before his opponent was on him, Davenport swung quickly away from this opponent, made a full turn to the rear, passed the ball to a teammate, who was free, and then broke free himself. Speed on attack, plus quick thinking, marked the play of Penn in that game and made the Quakers contenders in the league race.

A new Boston "strong boy", burly Edward James Maloney, hammered Jack Delaney, light-heavyweight king, to defeat in 10 thrill-crammed rounds last night before the largest throng that ever jammed Madison Square Garden.

And with Maloney's decisive, clean cut victory by decision came realization to the 18,184 spectators that a good big man can whip a good little man every time. Weight—a decisive margin of 31 pounds—and a merciless attack which never knew a backward step—defeated Delaney.

Beat Down Jack's Defense.

From the opening gong, the Boston giant threw his bulk on to his 172-pound rival. Two massive arms drove gruelling smashes through the best guard the Bridgeport, Conn., rapier could offer, while a flinty jaw and bulging muscled body absorbed the mightiest shots of Delaney's crashing broadsides. The result was inevitable. Most ring side critics awarded Maloney six rounds by decisive margins, Delaney two by a shade, with two even.

There were no knockdowns. Although Delaney's vaunted right hand smash and uppercut landed clean and true on Maloney's jaw time and again, the Boston burly was too big, too strong and too steeped in reserve power to be forced to more than shake his shaggy head like an irritated grizzly and crash forward for more.

Boston Backers Cleared Up.

The result, a startling upset in view of the 13 to 5 odds on Delaney at gong-time, sent a host of Boston supporters, their pockets crammed with money, back on the midnight train. Boston had backed its warrior to the limit.

Out of the Delaney debacle, however, came word that the sparkling French-Canadian in the third round had aggravated an old thumb injury suffered in the last match with Paul Berlenbach. Although the thumb was badly swollen, it was not definitely established that the bone was broken. Otherwise, the total visible injuries consisted of a black eye for Maloney and cut lips for Delaney.

Victor Once Knocked Out.

The rise of Maloney in the heavyweight division had been spasmodic up to last night. In his 31 ring contests he has scored 15 knockouts and won 13 decisions. He was knocked out once, by Leo Gates, the Indian, in four rounds in 1924. After winning from another Boston favorite, Jack Sharkey, in 10 rounds in 1924, Maloney lost to his fellow townsman twice in 1925—once by decision and again on a foul. Maloney is 24 years old and has two children.

In the throng that saw the fight were three governors—Moore, of New Jersey, Fuller of Massachusetts and Ritchie of Maryland, while only a prior engagement prevented the presence of Governor Smith of New York.

Many Notables Present.

In addition to notables of the society, stags and screen worlds, sportsmen and high government officials, the percentage of women in the audience was extremely high, being estimated at 20 per cent of the lower floor capacity.

The fight was part of Tex Rickard's elimination tournament to decide Gene Tunney's challenger next September. Maloney probably will be matched with the winner of the Sharkey-McTigue fight at Madison Square Garden March 3.

Three Governors Wire to Coolidge On Farm Measure

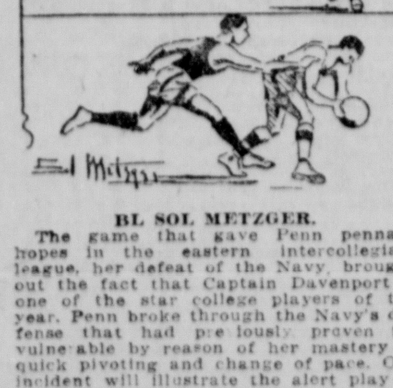

Governor McMullen has received word from the governors of Wisconsin, Iowa, and Illinois stating that they have sent messages to President Coolidge urging that he sign the McNary-Haugen bill.

McMullen addressed a message to the president Friday and also urged the governors of the middlewestern states to take similar action.

Speed Marks Penn Attack This Year

BY SOL METZGER.

The game that gave Penn pennant hopes in the eastern intercollegiate league, her defeat of the Navy, brought out the fact that Captain Davenport is one of the star college players of the year. Penn broke through the Navy's defense that had previously proven invulnerable by reason of her mastery of quick pivoting and change of pace. One incident will illustrate the alert play of the Red and Blue.

Davenport received a pass and was charged from the right by a Navy guard. But as the ball reached him, just a fraction before his opponent was on him, Davenport swung quickly away from this opponent, made a full turn to the rear, passed the ball to a teammate, who was free, and then broke free himself. Speed on attack, plus quick thinking, marked the play of Penn in that game and made the Quakers contenders in the league race.

Verdict to Boston Boy in Garden Glove Battle

BY DAVIS J. WALSH.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—(I. N. S.)—The continuity called for Goliath to play straight to his David at Madison Square Garden last night, but some bungler muffed the script. He sent Dave out there without his sling shot and Goliath without his temple and, in the natural course of events, Jimmy Maloney was declared the winner over Jack Delaney in a contest quite barren of competition.

This was the contest that was to make indoor fight history and in one respect it did. It induced New York to feel privileged to throw a half million dollars in some one's till to witness a monumental flop.

David Failed to Function.

Everyone knows that Goliath always was a sap for a sling shot to the temple. There is, however, a reservation or two to this statement and one of them is that the opposition must have the sling shot in the first place. The other is that all bets are off unless Goliath promises to bring his own temple. Of course, when neither condition is observed, there is nothing for it but to bow politely to all present and ask to be excused.

What actually happened was that Delaney had the sling, but not the shot.

Beef Had the Edge.

He flung his famous right hand at Maloney's jaw, which was supposed to be another Goliath's temple for lack of immunity, but, as I have already intimated, the continuity wasn't followed at all. The little man, Delaney, weighing 172 pounds, had the punch of a poleaxe with the men of his class that he hewed down on his way to the light-heavyweight championship, but it meant less than nothing to the 203½ pounds that Maloney carried into the ring with him.

I didn't give Delaney a single round of the 10-fought or contested or whatever term may occur to your charitable instincts. Delaney is said to have injured his right mitt, but this had little or no bearing on the result.

Delaney Outclassed.

It was a one-sided, lack lustre, formal affair, with Delaney outclassed from first to last and never a decisive blow struck. And the come-ons, always ready, came on in droves. Nearly 20,000 restive gents officially contributed about $200,000 to the pot, but what the turnover actually was only the spectators know and they are just like the daisies in telling you about it.

And so Jack Delaney's dream house is tumbled in ruins about him today, his fancy of world dominion gone beyond recall. It might have been said that his heavywe it championship bubble is no more if it wasn't for one fact. A bubble bursts and Delaney didn't exactly do that. He expired slowly, tediously like a deflating balloon. The deflation, in fact, required 10 rounds and it was quite painless, even less so to the worthy who paid $150 for his seat than to Delaney himself.

Jack's pain probably was more mental than physical, although Maloney hit him enough, in truth. The latter, discarding his so-called rushing attack, simply left-handed Delaney to the point where he felt justified in crossing his right and, from that point, it ceased to be a contest.

It seemed to me that the fight only proved one thing, beyond a suspicion I had entertained that Delaney didn't belong in the heavyweight division. It proved that Mr. Maloney was a man of parts, thoroughly able to use several styles of fighting.

Fought Clever Fight.

He had become identified as a rusher, but last night he fought Delaney as the writer felt he should be fought. He used his natural speed and superior left hand to outstep and outmaneuver the lighter man and then, after he had him propped in position, he brought the right into play. It stung Jack many times and oft; so often, in fact, that the suspicion seems justified that Maloney hasn't a real punch. Otherwise, it would be natural to expect that he would have had his man on the floor at least once during 10 rounds.

Right Lost Its Sting.

So much for Goliath. As for the boy who played David, he started with confidence and held the bigger man fairly even through the first round, but the left-handing began with the second and then Delaney crossed his first right to the jaw. Nothing happened, except that Maloney attacked with greater fury. This was his reaction every time Delaney scored.

Later in the round Delaney tried another right and I felt privileged to see it as a sign of weakness. It was one of those desperation punches, flung without the usual Delaney feint and quite without direction. Coming that early in the proceedings, it looked bad and it was.

Forced Jack to Ropes.

He managed to get a moral standoff with Maloney in the third, although at one stage Jim had him on the ropes for a barrage of punches. Delaney started the fourth with a dergee of speed, but Maloney came right back and almost annihilated him, crossing three hard rights to the jaw as a parting gesture at the bell.

The fifth was slow and uneventful and some of the grocery clerks in the rear set off a bleat. The sixth went to Maloney, also, in spite of the fact that, at one stage, Delaney made him miss and countered with left and right to the chin. This so irritated James that he didn't stop punching until the bell said he had to. The seventh was all Maloney without particular incident.

Jim Disdains Jaw Punches.

But the bell, announcing the eighth, warned Delaney that he must make his big play soon or forget the incident entirely. So he came out full of business and marched full into one of those straight lefts with which his features had grown so familiar. He finally got around to landing two hard rights to the jaw, but Maloney's only rejoinder was to smother Jack with lefts.

Both Land Low Blows.

As they attempted to shake the apologetic hand, Delaney, realizing he had only ten seconds in which to achieve a miracle, attempted to beat the gun with a punch to the jaw and a late raspberry crop began to bloom. But it was all even; Maloney previously had been cautioned thrice for low punching by Refree Magnolia.

Waltonites Kick On Carp Increase

DES MOINES, Ia., Feb. 19. — Iowa Izaak Walton league clubs have asked the state legislature, in session here, to do away with a paid fish and game department and administer the laws by means of an unsalaried board of six commissioners. Criticism has arisen recently of the fish and game department for permitting an increase of carp in Iowa lakes and streams for commercial purposes.

HUDKINS' TERMS STOP PROMOTER

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 19.—Ace Hudkins, Nebraska fighter, wants too much money for a proposed fight with Young Harry Wills, the San Diego colored fighter, who recently knocked out Jimmy Duffy, according to Tommy Simpson, Oakland promoter. Simpson said today that he couldn't meet Hudkins' price and would have to let the bout go by the boards.

Hudkins, however, may be matched for a Wills fight in San Francsco. Promoters of the Monarch Athletic club said they would waiting to stage the match, and that Wills is so anxious to get a crack at the Nebraska boy that he would fight for little or nothing.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Ace Hudkins, Nebraska welterweight, today agreed to meet Bert Colima, Mexican middleweight, in a 10-round open air bout March 6, at the Wrigley baseball field here. Injuries to Hudkins' hands in his recent defeat of Billy Atkinson of Los Angeles, will not prevent him starting training at once, the fighter said.

Rank Outsider Wins Dixie Race

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Cotlogomer, S. A. Cowan's five-year-old son of Sardanaple Soda, waded through a sea of mud at the fair grounds track here Friday afternoon to win the $50,000 New Orleans handicap.

The handicap for three-year-olds and up at a mile and one-sixteenth went to Cotlogomer, after he had beaten off Shark in a stretch drive. The time was 1:50 1-5. Banton was third in the field of 25 horses.

Cotlogomer was a $21.50 to 1 shot. Shark, one of thirteen horses in the field, paid only $4.40 and $2.60 on each $2 ticket to place and show. Banton's backers got $4.40 for their $2 show tickets.

A crowd variously estimated from 20,000 to 30,000 saw the large drove of runners splash mud in each other's eyes.

The horses went on the track ankle deep in mud. Cotologomer, with Jockey Callen up, began running at the start, took a long lead at the half-way mark and was never headed. He carried 107 pounds. Shark challenged in the stretch, but failed by a length to overtake the winner.

NEBRASKA RALLY WHIPS SOONERS

OKLAHOMA AGS TONIGHT.

The Oklahoma Aggies will meet Nebraska at the coliseum tonight. The game is expected to be a warm battle as the Stillwater Farmers defeated Nebraska two weeks ago. The tip-off is scheduled for 7:30.

BY GREGG McBRIDE.

Uncorking a rally at the start of the second period in which Coach Charley Black's Nebraska cagers were quite as hot as their scarlet-colored jerseys, the Cornhuskers swept through to a 36-26 victory over the University of Oklahoma in a thrilling game at the university coliseum Friday night.

The victory, the second achieved at the expense of the Sooners, shot Nebraska into a tie for third position in the Missouri Valley conference race.

Huskers Spurted Brilliantly.

The Cornhuskers were trailing on the short end of a 17-12 score at the start of the last half. In less than three minutes Nebraska had knotted the score at 18-all, and, when four more minutes had ticked away on the timer's watch, the Cornhuskers were riding along with a 28-18 lead, the Oklahoma machine promptly going on the rocks.

Sooners Take Lead.

Oklahoma was never headed during the first period. West and Holt scored from the floor to give the Sooners the opening four points. Baskets by Elliott and Smaha knotted the taly, but Drake and West, Oklahoma forward, slipped through the Nebraska defense and at one time the Norman entry was fronting the Cornhuskers by a 14-6 margin.

"Jug" Brown, who was injected to replace Elliott late in the first half turned the tide for Nebraska, his side shot and Page's easy toss enabling Nebraska to climb to within five points of the Oklahoma total at half-time.

Ted Page out-jumped Holt to tip in two more baskets and the Sooner took time out. The rest, however, refused to cool the rampaging Cornhuskers for Smaha dribbled in for a quick basket and Gerelick cut loose with another long shot which sank through for 2 points. Page was loose for another set-up basket to give Nebraska a 28-18 lead and put the game on ice.

The crowd witnessed a real battle between Centers Page of Nebraska and Holt of Oklahoma during the first half. Both are 6 feet 6 inches in height and the Sooner had a trifle the better of the argument during the first half. In the second period Page came back and played the Oklahoman off his feet, smothering Holt on the court, while breaking loose to score four goals on his own account. The score:

Gravity Keeps Fast Ball From Rising

BY AL DEMAREE.

Among the dozens of letters from fans all over the country in answer to my query, "Does an overhand fast ball really rise?" was a very plausible and interesting explanation from Jack Irving of Washington, D. C.

Mr Irving says that the apparent jump of the fast ball when it reaches the hitter is really an optical illusion. Opinion among ball players is divided, many pitchers, catchers and hitters believing their is really a "hop" on a good fast ball, and others denying it.

Mr. Irving's explanation follows:

WAYNE AHEAD OF METHODIST FIVE

Two baskets by Decker and one by Ray in the final four minutes of play gave Fred Dale's Wayne Normal hoopsters a 28 to 23 triumph over Nebraska Wesleyan Friday night in a ragged yet thrilling exhibition of the cage sport, staged in the Methodist arena. The invaders held a 19 to 12 advantage at the half-way mark, but were hard pressed throughout by Ren Dow's pony quint which was ushered onto the battle ground soon after the inaugural whistle.

Kroger made the initial marker of the evening with a hefty toss from mid-court after both teams had mauled each other all over the boards for a full five minutes.

Dow Changed Forwards.

Ward and Thomas replaced Dennis and Chittenden and the tussle took on the aspects of a track team tryout, with both squads milling furiously. Wendt, Ray and Kroger sank long baskets, however, and the Wildcat outfit was out in front with a 12-4 lead.

Wayne resorted almost entirely to long shots, with Captain Wendt in the leading role, whil ethe suburban five, with the fleet Thomas and Ward, was working the sphere down under the hoop before connecting up. Thomas' sinker and Decker's gift toss ended the scoring for the half.

Methodists Put On Rally.

Two pretty baskets by Ward and a pair by Thomas brought the Methodist rooters into action and, with scarcely four minutes to go, the University Place quintet was trailing by a single point, 23-24. It was then that Decker and Ray entered the picture with a trio of nifty flips to sew up the victory.

Dow's second string of midgets composed of Thomas and Ward, forwards, Buxon, center, Loder and Dixon, guards, performed in great style and might have pulled out a victory but for the big lead donated to the Dale crew.

Thomas Sets Scoring Pace.

Thomas led the attack with five field markers and a pair of gift tosses, while Ward copped second honors with five hoopers and a single free throw. Wendt, Decker and Kroger starred for the winners, the former's long shots being especially effective. Schroeder's defensive play was outstanding. The summary:

BROWNIES CLEAN UP ON CENTRAL

Lincoln Hi Cagers Easily Turn Back Knapple's Omaha Outfit.

After getting away to a slow start in the opening quarter, the Lincoln high cagers, with Captain Morris Fisher in the leading role, trounced the Omaha Central five by the wide margin of 34 to 15 on the Whittier court Friday night. Although Lincoln was not headed throughout the entire contest, only one field goal was registered in the first quarter, making the Red and Black total six points and the Purple's 5 at the end of the first period.

Fisher caged three baskets in the second canto, which, with a basket and two free throws by Kimball and four points via the gift route by Morrison, raised the Lincoln total to 18 points as the timer's gun was fired for the half.

Result Never in Doubt.

Central did not enter the scoring column during this period until Pattullo's archer found the iron hoop as the watch ticked away the last seconds of the half: This gave the capital city lads a commanding lead of 18 to 7, which was never threatened.

Following the intermission, Lincoln clung to the pace that was set in the second quarter and continued the never ceasing attack on the back board. Morrison was successful in satcheling two baskets and a free throw, while Dutch Koster sank a beautiful archer from the middle of the court.

Pulled Farther Ahead.

Puttallo, who was responsible for eight of his team's points, was the only Purple athlete to connect for a field goal during the third period. Grayson, inserted for Jones, and Fouts were successful at the foul line. With the score 25 to 11, the Red and Black cagers were not satisfied with this margin and opened up a new offensive that netted nine more points. Central had to be content with four more points, thus making the final count 34 to 15.

Coach Browne used ten men in the slaughter of the boys from the metropolis and both teams of scarlet jerseyed athletes showed their superiority to the talent of Central.

The Friday victory makes the capital city lads supreme over Omaha schools, since they have registered decisive wins over the representative institutions of that city.

Lincoln will play Coach Jimmie Johnson's five from Fremont tonight at the Whittier gym. A preliminary will be staged between the Lincoln reserves and the Omaha Tech seconds. This latter game is scheduled to get under way at 7 p. m. with the main event at 8 o'clock. The scores:

ATHLETES ROUND UP AT K. C. MEET

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Representatives of thirty-three Missouri Valley universities and colleges were here today to compete in the Kansas City Athletic club's twenty-second annual invitational indoor track and field meet.

The meet, furnishing practically the only opportunity of the indoor season for competition between the smaller colleges of this section and the dominating Missouri Valley conference schools, has drawn the stars of Missouri and Kansas colleges.

Interest in competition was centered about a series of two and three-team one-mile relays, the Shannon Douglas cup 600-yard race and the distance events.

Yenney Stars at One-Hand Shots

BY SOL METZGER.

In the newly formed Northwestern conference last year, Yenney, Whitman's center, was a star in scoring with the one-hand shot shot. His method is a good one to follow. Yenney made his leap on the left foot and kicked upward with his right in order to get height. His idea of shooting was to grasp the ball with both hands as he leaped. As he went up he would hold it with his right hand, kick down with his right leg and merely push the ball against the backboard, so it would rebound into the basket.

Two points are stressed in making this shot. The first is to push the ball on the line from the eyes to the point on the backboard you wish to strike. The other is to select this point approximately 12 inches above the rim of the basket and a bit to the right. The diagrams above the illustration show the angles used in scoring this shot.

GUZMAN OUT OF FULMER FIGHT

Doctor Forbids Frankie Swing His Fists In Monday Show.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. —Mickey Durane, not Frankie Guzman, will be the opponent of Check Fulmer in the 10-round semi-windup on the Monday night mitten carnival at Lincoln. Guzman had been training several days for the engagement with Fulmer, but a physician, acting for the Nebraska boxing commission, gave Frankie a medical examination Friday and declared him out of condition and physically unfit for the business of exchanging punches with as tough an opponent as Fulmer. Substitution of Durane, well known Omaha junior welter, was arranged last night.

Confirmed by Hale.

Confirmation that Durane, instead of Guzman, will battle Check Fulmer in Monday night's Maccabees fight program at the city auditorium, Lincoln, came from Matchmaker Billy Hale Saturday.

"Guzman was out of condition," Hale said, "and the boxing commision very properly declined to let him go. Mickey Durane, who is subbing for Guzman, is an aggressive, crowd-pleasing scrapper and will give Check plenty to think about in the Monday semi-windup."

According to the matchmaker, Durane probably will go into the ring scaling at 142 to 144, while Fulmer's poundage likely will be in the region of 147.

Tyler Weltmer, former professional boxer and student of the University of Nebraska the past two years, has been nominated by the state boxing commission as the Monday night referee.

Verdict to Boston Boy in Garden Glove Battle

BY DAVIS J. WALSH.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—(I. N. S.)—The continuity called for Goliath to play straight to his David at Madison Square Garden last night, but some bungler muffed the script. He sent Dave out there without his sling shot and Goliath without his temple and, in the natural course of events, Jimmy Maloney was declared the winner over Jack Delaney in a contest quite barren of competition.

This was the contest that was to make indoor fight history and in one respect it did. It induced New York to feel privileged to throw a half million dollars in some one's till to witness a monumental flop.

David Failed to Function.

Everyone knows that Goliath always was a sap for a sling shot to the temple. There is, however, a reservation or two to this statement and one of them is that the opposition must have the sling shot in the first place. The other is that all bets are off unless Goliath promises to bring his own temple. Of course, when neither condition is observed, there is nothing for it but to bow politely to all present and ask to be excused.

What actually happened was that Delaney had the sling, but not the shot.

Beef Had the Edge.

He flung his famous right hand at Maloney's jaw, which was supposed to be another Goliath's temple for lack of immunity, but, as I have already intimated, the continuity wasn't followed at all. The little man, Delaney, weighing 172 pounds, had the punch of a poleaxe with the men of his class that he hewed down on his way to the light-heavyweight championship, but it meant less than nothing to the 203½ pounds that Maloney carried into the ring with him.

I didn't give Delaney a single round of the 10 fought or contested or whatever term may occur to your charitable instincts. Delaney is said to have injured his right mitt, but this had little or no bearing on the result.

Delaney Outclassed.

It was a one-sided, lack lustre, formal affair, with Delaney outclassed from first to last and never a decisive blow struck. And the come-ons, always ready, came on in droves. Nearly 20,000 restive gents officially contributed about $200,000 to the pot, but what the turnover actually was only the spectators know and they are just like the daisies in telling you about it.

And so Jack Delaney's dream house is tumbled in ruins about him today, his fancy of world dominion gone beyond recall. It might have been said that his heavyweight championship bubble is no more if it wasn't for one fact. A bubble bursts and Delaney didn't exactly do that. He expired slowly, tediously like a deflating balloon. The deflation, in fact, required 10 rounds and it was quite painless, even less so to the worthy who paid $150 for his seat than to Delaney himself.

Jack's pain probably was more mental than physical, although Maloney hit him enough, in truth. The latter, discarding his so-called rushing attack, simply left-handed Delaney to the point where he felt justified in crossing his right and, from that point, it ceased to be a contest.

It seemed to me that the fight only proved one thing, beyond a suspicion I had entertained that Delaney didn't belong in the heavyweight division. It proved that Mr. Maloney was a man of parts, thoroughly able to use several styles of fighting.

Fought Clever Fight.

He had become identified as a rusher, but last night he fought Delaney as the writer felt he should be fought. He used his natural speed and superior left hand to outstep and outmaneuver the lighter man and then, after he had him propped in position, he brought the right into play. It stung Jack many times and oft; so often, in fact, that the suspicion seems justified that Maloney hasn't a real punch. Otherwise, it would be natural to expect that he would have had his man on the floor at least once during 10 rounds.

Right Lost Its Sting.

So much for Goliath. As for the boy who played David, he started with confidence and held the bigger man fairly even through the first round, but the left-handing began with the second and then Delaney crossed his first right to the jaw. Nothing happened, except that Maloney attacked with greater fury. This was his reaction every time Delaney scored.

Later in the round Delaney tried another right and I felt privileged to see it as a sign of weakness. It was one of those desperation punches, flung without the usual Delaney feint and quite without direction. Coming that early in the proceedings, it looked bad and it was.

He managed to get a moral standoff with Maloney in the third, although at one stage Jim had him on the ropes for a barrage of punches. Delaney started the fourth with a dergee of speed, but Maloney came right back and almost annihilated him, crossing three hard rights to the jaw as a parting gesture at the bell.

The fifth was slow and uneventful and some of the grocery clerks in the rear set off a bleat. The sixth went to Maloney, also, in spite of the fact that, at one stage, Delaney made him miss and countered with left and right to the chin. This so irritated James that he didn't stop punching until the bell said he had to. The seventh was all Maloney without particular incident.

But the bell, announcing the eighth, warned Delaney that he must make his big play soon or forget the incident entirely. So he came out full of business and marched full into one of those straight lefts with which his features had grown so familiar. He finally got around to landing two hard rights to the jaw, but Maloney's only rejoinder was to smother Jack with lefts.

Both Land Low Blows.

As they attempted to shake the apologetic hand, Delaney, realizing he had only ten seconds in which to achieve a miracle, attempted to beat the gun with a punch to the jaw and a late raspberry crop began to bloom. But it was all even; Maloney previously had been cautioned thrice for low punching by Refree Magnolia.

Waltonites Kick On Carp Increase

DES MOINES, Ia., Feb. 19. —Iowa Izaak Walton league clubs have asked the state legislature, in session here, to do away with a paid fish and game department and administer the laws by means of an unsalaried board of six commissoners. Criticism has arisen recently of the fish and game department for permitting an increase of carp in Iowa lakes and streams for commercial purposes.

HUDKINS' TERMS STOP PROMOTER

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 19.—Ace Hudkins, Nebraska fighter, wants too much money for a proposed fight with Young Harry Wills, the San Diego colored fighter, who recently knocked out Jimmy Duffy, according to Tommy Simpson, Oakland promoter. Simpson said today that he couldn't meet Hudkins' price and would have to let the bout go by the boards.

Hudkins, however, may be matched for a Wills fight in San Francisco. Promoters of the Monarch Athletic club said they would willing to stage the match, and that Wills is so anxious to get a crack at the Nebraska boy that he would fight for little or nothing.

Injuries to Hudkins' hands in his recent defeat of Billy Atkinson of Los Angeles, will not prevent him starting training at once, the fighter said.

Rank Outsider Wins Dixie Race

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Cotlogomer, S. A. Cowan's five-year-old son of Sardanaple Soda, waded through a sea of mud at the fair grounds track here Friday afternoon to win the $50,000 New Orleans handicap.

The handicap for three-year-olds and up at a mile and one-sixteenth went to Cotlogomer, after he had beaten off Shark in a stretch drive. The time was 1:50 1-5. Banton was third in the field of 25 horses.

Cotlogomer was a $21.50 to 1 shot. Shark, one of thirteen horses in the field, paid only $4.40 and $2.60 on each $2 ticket to place and show. Banton's backers got $4.40 for their $2 show tickets.

A crowd variously estimated from 20,000 to 30,000 saw the large drove of runners splash mud in each other's eyes.

The horses went on the track ankle deep in mud. Cotologomer, with Jockey Callen up, began running at the start ,took a long lead at the half-way mark and was never headed. He carried 107 pounds. Shark challenged in the stretch, but failed by a length to overtake the winner.

NEBRASKA RALLY WHIPS SOONERS

OKLAHOMA AGS TONIGHT.

The Oklahoma Aggies will meet Nebraska at the coliseum tonight. The game is expected to be a warm battle as the Stillwater Farmers defeated Nebraska two weeks ago. The tip-off is scheduled for 7:30.

BY GREGG McBRIDE.

Uncorking a rally at the start of the second period in which Coach Charley Black's Nebraska cagers were quite as hot as their scarlet-colored jerseys, the Cornhuskers swept through to a 36-26 victory over the University of Oklahoma in a thrilling game at the university coliseum Friday night.

The victory, the second achieved at the expense of the Sooners, shot Nebraska into a tie for third position in the Missouri Valley conference race.

Huskers Spurted Brilliantly.

The Cornhuskers were trailing on the short end of a 17-12 score at the start of the last half. In less than three minutes Nebraska had knotted the score at 18-all, and, when four more minutes had ticked away on the timer's watch, the Cornhuskers were riding along with a 28-18 lead, the Oklahoma machine promptly going on the rocks.

Sooners Take Lead.

Oklahoma was never headed during the first period. West and Holt scored from the floor to give the Sooners the opening four points. Baskets by Elliott and Smaha knotted the taly, but Drake and West, Oklahoma forward, slipped through the Nebraska defense and at one time the Norman entry was fronting the Cornhuskers by a 14-6 margin.

"Jug" Brown, who was injected to replace Elliott late in the first half turned the tide for Nebraska, his side shot and Page's easy toss enabling Nebraska to climb to within five points of the Oklahoma total at half-time.

Ted Page out-jumped Holt to tip in two more baskets and the Sooner took time out. The rest, however, refused to cool the rampaging Cornhuskers for Smaha dribbled in for a quick basket and Gerelick cut loose with another long shot which sank through for 2 points. Page was loose for another set-up basket to give Nebraska a 28-18 lead and put the game on ice.

The crowd witnessed a real battle between Centers Page of Nebraska and Holt of Oklahoma during the first half. Both are 6 feet 6 inches in height and the Sooner had a trifle the better of the argument during the first half. In the second period Page came back and played the Oklahoman off his feet, smothering Holt on the court, while breaking loose to score four goals on his own account. The score:

Gravity Keeps Fast Ball From Rising

BY AL DEMAREE.

Among the dozens of letters from fans all over the country in answer to my query, "Does an overhand fast ball really rise?" was a very plausible and interesting explanation from Jack Irving of Washington, D. C.

Mr Irving says that the apparent jump of the fast ball when it reaches the hitter is really an optical illusion. Opinion among ball players is divided, many pitchers, catchers and hitters believing their is really a "hop" on a good fast ball, and others denying it.

Mr. Irving's explanation follows:

WAYNE AHEAD OF METHODIST FIVE

Two baskets by Decker and one by Ray in the final four minutes of play gave Fred Dale's Wayne Normal hoopsters a 28 to 23 triumph over Nebraska Wesleyan Friday night in a ragged yet thrilling exhibition of the cage sport, staged in the Methodist arena. The invaders held a 19 to 12 advantage at the half-way mark, but were hard pressed throughout by Ren Dow's pony quint which was ushered onto the battle ground soon after the inaugural whistle.

Kroger made the initial marker of the evening with a hefty toss from mid-court after both teams had mauled each other all over the boards for a full five minutes.

Dow Changed Forwards.

Ward and Thomas replaced Dennis and Chittenden and the tussle took on the aspects of a track team tryout, with both squads milling furiously. Wendt, Ray and Kroger sank long baskets, however, and the Wildcat outfit was out in front with a 12-4 lead.

Wayne resorted almost entirely to long shots, with Captain Wendt in the leading role, whil ethe suburban five, with the fleet Thomas and Ward, was working the sphere down under the hoop before connecting up. Thomas' sinker and Decker's gift toss ended the scoring for the half.

Methodists Put On Rally.

Two pretty baskets by Ward and a pair by Thomas brought the Methodist rooters into action and, with scarcely four minutes to go, the University Place quintet was trailing by a single point, 23-24. It was then that Decker and Ray entered the picture with a trio of nifty flips to sew up the victory.

Dow's second string of midgets composed of Thomas and Ward, forwards, Buxon, center, Loder and Dixon, guards, performed in great style and might have pulled out a victory but for the big lead donated to the Dale crew.

Thomas Sets Scoring Pace.

Thomas led the attack with five field markers and a pair of gift tosses, while Ward copped second honors with five hoopers and a single free throw. Wendt, Decker and Kroger starred for the winners, the former's long shots being especially effective. Schroeder's defensive play was outstanding. The summary:

BROWNIES CLEAN UP ON CENTRAL

Lincoln Hi Cagers Easily Turn Back Knapple's Omaha Outfit.

After getting away to a slow start in the opening quarter, the Lincoln high cagers, with Captain Morris Fisher in the leading role, trounced the Omaha Central five by the wide margin of 34 to 15 on the Whittier court Friday night. Although Lincoln was not headed throughout the entire contest, only one field goal was registered in the first quarter, making the Red and Black total six points and the Purple's 5 at the end of the first period.

Fisher caged three baskets in the second canto, which, with a basket and two free throws by Kimball and four points via the gift route by Morrison, raised the Lincoln total to 18 points as the timer's gun was fired for the half.

Result Never in Doubt.

Central did not enter the scoring column during this period until Pattullo's archer found the iron hoop as the watch ticked away the last seconds of the half: This gave the capital city lads a commanding lead of 18 to 7, which was never threatened.

Following the intermission, Lincoln clung to the pace that was set in the second quarter and continued the never ceasing attack on the back board. Morrison was successful in satcheling two baskets and a free throw, while Dutch Koster sank a beautiful archer from the middle of the court.

Pulled Farther Ahead.

Puttallo, who was responsible for eight of his team's points, was the only Purple athlete to connect for a field goal during the third period. Grayson, inserted for Jones, and Fouts were successful at the foul line. With the score 25 to 11, the Red and Black cagers were not satisfied with this margin and opened up a new offensive that netted nine more points. Central had to be content with four more points, thus making the final count 34 to 15.

Coach Browne used ten men in the slaughter of the boys from the metropolis and both teams of scarlet jerseyed athletes showed their superiority to the talent of Central.

The Friday victory makes the capital city lads supreme over Omaha schools, since they have registered decisive wins over the representative institutions of that city.

Lincoln will play Coach Jimmie Johnson's five from Fremont tonight at the Whittier gym. A preliminary will be staged between the Lincoln reserves and the Omaha Tech seconds. This latter game is scheduled to get under way at 7 p. m. with the main event at 8 o'clock. The scores:

ATHLETES ROUND UP AT K. C. MEET

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Representatives of thirty-three Missouri Valley universities and colleges were here today to compete in the Kansas City Athletic club's twenty-second annual invitational indoor track and field meet.

The meet, furnishing practically the only opportunity of the indoor season for competition between the smaller colleges of this section and the dominating Missouri Valley conference schools, has drawn the stars of Missouri and Kansas colleges.

Interest in competition was centered about a series of two and three-team one-mile relays, the Shannon Douglas cup 600-yard race and the distance events.

Yenney Stars at One-Hand Shots

BY SOL METZGER.

In the newly formed Northwestern conference last year, Yenney, Whitman's center, was a star in scoring with the one-hand short shot. His method is a good one to follow. Yenney made his leap on the left foot and kicked upward with his right in order to get height. His idea of shooting was to grasp the ball with both hands as he leaped. As he went up he would hold it with his right hand, kick down with his right leg and merely push the ball against the backboard, so it would rebound into the basket.

Two ponits are stressed in making this shot. The first is to push the ball on the line from the eyes to the point on the backboard you wish to strike. The other is to select this point approximately 12 inches above the rim of the basket and a bit to the right. The diagrams above the illustration show the angles used in scoring this shot.

GUZMAN OUT OF FULMER FIGHT

Doctor Forbids Frankie Swing His Fists In Monday Show.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. —Mickey Durane, not Frankie Guzman, will be the opponent of Check Fulmer in the 10-round semi-windup on the Monday night mitten carnival at Lincoln. Guzman had been training several days for the engagement with Fulmer, but a physician, acting for the Nebraska boxing commssion, gave Frankie a medical examination Friday and declared him out of condition and physically unfit for the business of exchanging punches with as tough an opponent as Fulmer. Substitution of Durane, well known Omaha junior welter, was arranged last night.

Confirmed by Hale.

Confirmation that Durane, instead of Guzman, will battle Check Fulmer in Monday night's Maccabees fight program at the city auditorium, Lincoln, came from Matchmaker Billy Hale Saturday.

"Guzman was out of condition," Hale said, "and the boxing commision very properly declined to let him go. Mickey Durane, who is subbing for Guzman, is an aggressive, crowd-pleasing scrapper and will give Check plenty to think about in the Monday semi-windup."

According to the matchmaker, Durane probably will go into the ring scaling at 142 to 144, while Fulmer's poundage likely will be in the region of 147.

Tyler Weltmer, former professional boxer and student of the University of Nebraska the past two years, has been nominated by the state boxing commission as the Monday night referee.
